

THREE SERMONS

VIZ.

ptitt

1. The Churches Hazard.
2. Nabals Arraignement.
3. Moses old Square for Judges.

---

Delivered vpon severall occasions
in the Cathedrall Church of NORWICH.

---

By THO. REEVE, Minister of Gods Word at COLEBY in NORFOLKE.

---

L O N D O N,
Printed by AUGUSTINE MATHEVVE,
for JOHN GRISMOND, and are to be sold by EDVARD MARTIN at the signe of the Bible, at the Cockey head
in Norwich. 1632.

8TC

20532-4

THREE SERMONS

VIZ.

ptitt

1. The Churches Hazard.
2. Nabals Arraignement.
3. Moses old Square for Fudges.

---

Delivered vpon severall occasions
in the Cathedrall Church of NORWICH.

---

By THO. REEVE, Minister of Gods Word at COLEBY in NORFOLKE.

---

L O N D O N,
Printed by AVGVSTINE MATHEVVE, for IOHN GRISMOND, and are to be sold by EDVVARD MARTIN at the signe
of the Bible, at the Cockey head
in Norwich. 1632.

a

THE CHVRCHES HAZARD

---

Deliuered in a Sermon in the Cathedrall Church in NORVVICH, vpon the fifth of Nouember.

1629.

---

By THO. REEVE, Minister of Gods Word at COLEBY in NORFOLKE.

---

---

LONDON,
Printed by AVGVSTINE MATHEVVE S,
for IOHN GRISMOND, and are to be solde at the Cockey head in Norwich by EDVWARD MARTIN, at the signe of the bible. 1632.

ENCLOSURE

1950

1911

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

2000

TO ALL THE ADHERENTS of the Romish Church amongst vs.

How cometh it to passe, that Rome is become the Seminary of mischief? and that where Martyrs once abounded, now Conspirators? the faith of that Church being once famous through the world, but now her Bloodshed; all Christian Countries having felt her tumults, and many her Treacheries. Can we iudge her that delights in crueltie, the tender Mother? no, the <sup>a</sup>scarlet <sup>a</sup>Rev. 17.4.
Whore? Are these her gentle warnings? her spirituall stripes?
What to strike Nations to death? Did Christ ever prescribe, that a Church should bee advanced by such direfull designs, dismall stratagems? Let his Records bee searched, and the Grant of this charter shewn. No, this practise nature disclaimes, how much more Scripture detests? Traytors are the worst men in the bad age, <sup>Luke 21.</sup> yea the Monsters of the perilous times. Out of the Ma- <sup>2 Tim. 3. 4.</sup> nuscript of Iudas, Treason may be prooued but out of the Gospel of Christ neuer: Oh then that it should bee held the perfection of Religion, the mould of merit! I wonder those practised disciples blush not to call themselves Iesuites, and that the Pope the Crafts-master of the science doth not hang downe his head in the sight of the whole world, to stile himselfe the Vicar of Christ.
Oh blessed Saniour, thou which didst suffer thy owne blood to bee shed, and badst rather loose thy life then thy meekenesse, which neuer struckest enemy to death, though thou haddest <sup>b</sup>all power, <sup>b</sup>Math. 28.
which didst <sup>c</sup>coole the breaths of them which would haue had <sup>c</sup>Luk 9. 55.
fire fetched from heauen, and didst teach the <sup>d</sup>Discipline of pa- <sup>d</sup>Math. 26 52.
tience to that military Apostle which did cut off Malchus his eare, which thy selfe wert an innocent <sup>e</sup>Lambe, and didst sende <sup>e</sup>1 Pet. 1. 19.
forth thy Messengers as <sup>f</sup>Lambes, which wouldst haue king- <sup>f</sup>Math. 10 16.

g Cum sitis
inhumani, im-
pii, crudeles,
homicidæ, non amplius eritis Christiani. Lucifer. Carali-
tan. pro Athan.
l. 1. p. 65.
h Transubstan-tiation The utter reſecting
of Hoc eſt corpus meum for a cleare place,
and concluding Non poteſt per vllam ſcriptu-
ram probari
Fiſher cont.
capt. Babilon.
n. 8. Bellar-
mines confeſ-ſing Scotus his opinion (that domes ſubdued vnto thee by revealing of mysteries, and not by depriving of life, how wilt thou acknowledge ſuch followers to bee of thy retinne? No, here Antichriſt is diſcovered, in that he is ſo oppoſite to Chriſt. g Seeing ye are inhumane, impious, cruell, homicides, yee are no longer Chriſtians. Their abating of the Scriptures, the mingling of their owne works with Chriſts precious ſatisfactions, the ſteame of their Brothell-houſes, their ſhop of Imagery, their new built Chaldron of Purgatory, the grounding of the principles of their Religion out of Apocryphall, allegoricall, parabolicall places, or out of moſt darke and intricate places of Scripture, from which no convincing arguments are to bee fetched, the voluntary confeſſion of their owne Writers that neither h Tranſubſtantiation, i Communion in one kind, k Indulgences, l ſacrifice for quicke and dead, m prayers vnto Saints, worſhipping of Images, n Chriſts deſcenſion into Limbus patrum, o Confeſſion, nor many other points are cleerely to bee proved out of Scripture, their reviving of the ancient heresies of the p Valentinians, and Heracleonites, q Angelickes, r Carpocratians, s Collyridians, t Sampſæan, v Manichees, * Meſſalians, x Nudipedales, y Cathariſts, z Armenians, a Apoſtolickes, b Marcus, c Novati-ans and others, their Boy-fathers alleadged in ſolemne controthere is not eſt any place ſo expreſſe, that without the Churches declaration, can eu-dently conſtraine vs to admit it) not to be improbable de Euch. l. 3 c. 23. §. Non diſſimili.

s Haſte Communion cuſtome. Greg. de Val. deſu. Euch. c. 10. laſe of the peoples denoſſion Har. k Indulgences. Roff Aſſert. luth. conf. art. 18. Cajet opuſc. tom. 1. tract.
15 de Ind. cap. 1. l Sacrifice for quicke and dead. Coſtor in comp. oth fid. dem prop 5.
c. 2 p. 162. m Prayers vnto Saints and Images Barm. in 22. q. 1 art. 10. n Chriſts deſ-cenſion into Limbus Patrum, no where expreſſed, that Chriſt went thither to deliuer the ſoules of the Fathers, Melchior Canus. l. 3. loc. Theol. c. 4. o Confeſſion Gloſſ in Grat. de pœn. diſt. 5. c. 1 in pœnit. p Valentinians and Heraclonites for extreame vndiſon. Ire-næ. l. 1 c. 18. Aug. l. de hæ. c. 16 q Angelickes for worſhipping of Angels, Aug. de hæ. c. 39.
r Carpocratians for worſhipping of Images, Epiph. hæ. 27. Aug. de hæ. cap 7. s Collyridian for worſhipping of the virgin Mary, Epiph. hæ. 48. t Sampſæans for reliques, Epiph. hæ. 32. v Manichees for prielts ſingle life, Aug. Epiſt. 74 Id. de mo-rib. Ecc & Manich. l. 2. c. 13. * Meſſalians that Baptiſme doth onely purg ſinnes going before, Theod. diuin. Decr. c. de Baptiſmo. x Nudipedales for their bare footed Franſiſ-cans and Seculars, Aug. de hæ. c. 58. y Cathariſts for merits, Iſidor. Etym. lib. 8 c. 4. z Armenians for worſhipping of the Croſſe, Niceph. l. 18. c. 45 a Apoſtolicks for voluntary poverty, Epiph. hæ. 61. b Marcus the Magiſſian for hauing blood in the Chalice.
Epiph. hæ. 34. c Novatians for doubting of remiſſion of ſinnes, Amb li 1. de Pœn. c. 7.
& l. 2. c. 5.

uerſies,

versies, the disgladiations of their owne Divines against them, and the maine points of our profession proved substantially out of their owne Writers, make mee to renounce them; but their conspiracies make mee to abhorre them, defy them, looke agast upon them; but especially when treason comes to be dogmatized by their Schoolemen, every Romish Theologue almost now adayes not being able to compose a Body of divinity without this sanguinary Maxime inserted, iustifying the lawfulnessse of Treason, and (as if it were a professed Art) describing, and prescribing the meanes of it; making no conscience of it after <sup>d</sup> condemnatory sentence, yea if the Popes <sup>c</sup> interpretative sentence can but bee conceined it is enough; to doe but deny their Religion, is to <sup>f</sup> runne upon the sword of the Church, & any person then appointed by the Pope may take away the life of his Soueraigne, if none bee appointed the Successor may doe it, if there bee no Successor the Kingdome may doe it; yea <sup>h</sup> Mariana is so impudent that hee saith, that it is a wholesome meditation for Princes to perswade themseines that they may bee then killed, and the party not onely to doe it lawfully but with glory and commendation. Bellarmine I confesse was a modest Papist; his tenets not steeped in the an-dationnesse of many; yet <sup>i</sup> the best of them is but a brier, and the most righteous sharper then a thorne-hedge, for when I consider his <sup>k</sup> treasonable conclusions, and his damnable Letter to Blackwell, what doe I hold him but a Cardinall Engine of sedition? The Pope is held by many a Holy Father, as if the Sanctuary of peace, truth, and piety were in his brest, yet when I call to mind how Urbane 2. held killing of Kings no murther, but a zeale to the Catholicke mother, and how many m Emperours haue beene troubled by Popes with the losse of their peace, kingdomes, or lines, and other Kings and Princes

<sup>d</sup> Suarez defens. fid. Cath-
adv. Aug sect.
exc. lib. 6. c. 4. n.
18.
<sup>e</sup> Bann 2. x. p.
39c.
<sup>f</sup> Sand. de clau-
Dan. p. 25.
<sup>g</sup> Suarez def.
fid. Cat adv.
Aug. sect. er.
lib. 6. c. 4. n. 18.
<sup>h</sup> Mariana.
instit. reg. p. 61.
<sup>i</sup> Micah 7. 4.
<sup>k</sup> Bell de pon-
tif. l. 5. c. 6. 7. 8.
Bell de pot.
sum. Pont. ad Guliel. Barcl.
p. 97.
<sup>l</sup> Cæf. Baron.
ex lvo an.
1089. n. 11.
<sup>m</sup> Consider the miseries of these Emperours Kings,
and Princes.

Leo Isaurus. Sigon. de rag. Ital. p. 103. Ludovicus pius papir mass. annal. p. 04. Childes-rick. Amoin. gest. Franc. p. 403. Otho the great Luitp. l. 6. c. 6 Henry the 1. Ben. Card. vit.
Hild. p. 42. Henry the 4. Naucl. p. 777. Henr. 5. vrisp p. 272. Lothar us Otho Fris l. 7. c. 18.
Frid. Barbarossa. Naucl. p. 856. Henry 6. Hoved p. 689. Philip his brother, Naucl. p. 898.
Otho 4. Walsing Ypod Neust. p. 460. Fred. 7. Pandult. col. hist. Neap. p. 245. Henry 7.
Avent. p. 597. 58. Wenceslaus i head. Niem. p. 68. Ioane Q. of Naples. Neust. p. 1024.
Manfred. K. of Nap. & Sic. Naucl. p. 946. Conradinus Paral. v. r. p. 11. Julian & Lawrence the Dukes of Florence, Vol. p. 51.

The Epistle Dedicatorie.

Mat. Paris.
p. 223.
Guil. Neu-
brig. p. 169.
Orat. Sixt. 5.
hab. in Con-
sisto. anno.
1589

Nah. 3. 1.

Apoc. 17. 5.
2 Thess. 2. 3.

in the like manner molested, how <sup>a</sup> King Iohn amongst our selves, and <sup>o</sup> Henry the second were put to basenesse, how <sup>2</sup> Elizabeth after the Bull of Pius Quintas was never at rest, how <sup>p</sup> Sixtus the first instigated by a panegyricall Oration the murdering of Henry the third in France, by a Dominican Friar, I can count the Pope no other then a murdering Father, yea the Cut-throat of Christendome. Beside, when I recount the massacres of Merindoll and Cabriers, Vassei, Paris, and of that here intended in England at this Gun-powder Treason, I can speake to Rome in no milder termes then God did once to Niniveh, <sup>9</sup> Oh thou bloody Citie.

Oh yee then which are the admirers of that Church, which thinke it the Paradise where the tree of life doth grow, and hold no ground holy but that which that Church sanctifies, see at last the damnable impostures yee have beene mis-led with; renounce that <sup>r</sup> Woman of fornications, and <sup>t</sup> Man of sinne bee it for no other reason then these principles of blood; Treason can never bee an appendant of the true Faith. And oh yee Priests and Iesuits, the spirit of conspiracy, and nerves of treason, who with wit abuse the whole world, and have raised up nothing a great while but a learned villany, by whom all the Commotions, the turbulencies in the Christian world have beene either acted, or animated, consider at last what it is yee practise, Treason; Treason, the attempt of rashnesse, the vent of hatred; the scandall of humanity, the botch of Religion; wise men should not doe it, good men will not. What therefore will yee for this still streine your wits, and your neckes? and make your selves fearfull to your owne people, odious to us? no, if reverence to God and man have not quite forsaken you, if yee have not forgotten the honor & safety of the men in your own corpses, desist from such hideous, horrible, graceles designs; And the rather because (saining the reputation of your owne indgements) yee are circumvented, being but made slaves to the subtilty, & insolency of your Pope; for what I beseech you (by all the prickles of conscience that are left in your bosomes) hath beene these many yeares the maine incentive of all your disloyalties; hath it not beene to make your Pope not onely chiefe Priest, but chiefe Potentate in the Christian world? where his temporall invisdiction hath not beene acknowledged, there ye have have laboured to thrust it in by this spirituall seat. But (if ye have but one drop of spirituall ointment left vpon your eyes) consider if the opinion be not as vaine, as the attempt is desperate; who knowes not the forgery, as well as the ambition of this Title? But it shall not be so amongst you, damps the Popes affected Primacie over all Bishops; but my Kingdome is not of this world, throttes over all his Supremacie Kings & Emperors; Christ neuer assumed it, Peter neuer chalenged it, the auncient Bishops of the Romish Church neuer pretended title to it, how then should it now come to be a right unquestionable? Search antiquities; * Constantine the great was so farre from suffering Iulius the Bishop of Rome for teing his Head that he gave not his Legates (but Eustathius Patriarke of Antioch) precedence in the Councell of Nice. * Leo commanded not Martian the Emperour to summon a Councell, but made humble request for it by the Elergy and people of Constantinople, y and with teares and sobs he begged of Theodosius to have had a Councell in Italy but could not obtaine it; the words of Pope Agatho of old were not imperious to Heraclius, and Tiberius the Emperours, but * For the obedience wee owe you, Gregory the Great acknowledged himselfe the servant of Mauritius, for a Christ granted the Emperour not onely to rule over souldiers but Priests; in Iustinians dayes it is evident that the Emperour was hold so farre superiour to the Pope, that the sayd Emperour deposed two Popes, Silverius and Vigilius, and hee himselfe as well as Theodora the Empreffe thanked Belizarius their Agent for it; Eutropius saith, that in former times such was the obedience of Popes to Emperours, that if the Emperour sent for the Pope, & all businesse set aside, he went though he knew it were to goe into banishment. The boundlesse power and immoderate Tyranny of Popes over Princes in those ages, then were not knowne; are yee not perswaded in your consciences, that the first raise of Popes, was by the Grace of Princes, and the next by their owne masterlesse Ambition? your owne Writers will testifie as much. Your Ceremoniary saith that before Charles the great, no man ever tooke the Crowne of the Empire, of the Pope, Bonifacius the eighth, was the first that ever inuested himselfe in this supre-

The Epistle Dedicatorie.

r Luke 22.26.

u Io. 18.36.

* Theo. 1.1.6.7.

* Leo ad Cler.

& plebem

Constant. ep.

23.

y Cum lachry-

mis & gemitu-

bus Leo ep. 14.

ad Theodo-

sum.

* Pro obedi-

tia quam de-

buius. Con-

cil. Constant.

Ad. 4.

* Christus do-

minari Impe-

ratores militi-

bus sed etiam

sacerdotibus

concessit. Greg.

lib. 2. ep. 103.

b Pontifical.

Cont. tom. 7.

in vita Vigili.

c Omni neg-

lecta occasi-

ne. Eutropius.

d Hic affirma-

mus ante Ca-

rolum mag-

nus neminem

Imperatorem

manu coronari

ex antiquo Pon-

tificis Romani

Interp. Eccl.

lib. 1. c. 23.

c. 7.

macie,

The Epistle Dedicatorie.

• Bonifacius 8. multam apparenter defici-
vit quod Rom.
Pontifex est
supra reges in temporalibus
quod tamen
oculatissimi Theologi di-
cunt esse fal-
sum. In maior
4. sent. distinc.
20. q. 2.
f Mea potestas
non pendet
a Papa sed a Deo immediate, & vanum
est quod dici
solet Papam
habere superi-
ore Part. v. sp.
in Ludou. 4.
g. Potestas la-
cu'aris maior
est spirituali,
nec quod ista
ei est subiecta
in aliquo. Ioh.
de Paris. de
par. Reg. &
papali. c. 5.
h Non Apo-stolice iure Nec enim il-
lud tibi dare
quod non ha-
buit, Petrus potuit. Bern.
de Confid. ad
Eug. lib. 2.
Fide tempo-rum non E-vangeliorum.
Hilar.

masie, and yet (Major saith) the Indications Divines of those times held it but a corrupt isle. f Ludovicus the fourth, was wont to say, that it was a meere vanitie, to hold that the Pope had a Superiour to him upon earth. Siohannes de Parisijs concludeth absolutely that the secular power is supream. h Bernard himselfe avoucheth to the Pope, that his power is not by Apolitical right. Why then fight ye thus for a new invention? Which if it be come to bee a point of faith, yet it is not the faith of the Gospell, but of the times, and that not of the purer Primitive times: Will yee bee the defenders of an usurpation? and venter your lives and soules for a fancy of power? Oh that ever men of your acutenesse, and acrimony, should be thus insatiated to bee instruments of such flagitious, execrable practises for an arrogant person? Who sees not that since the Pope came to this power, he hath given himselfe to nothing but to haughtinesse, and slothfulness, he is too great now to open his mouth in a pulpit, or to busie his penne to discusse Controuersies of Divinity, the zealous and laborious Bishops of Rome are vanished, they preach only by your lips, and write onely by your hands, their chief study is now to invent mischief, and to incite you to attempt them; Oh therefore go open your closed eyelids, and rubbe upon your consciences, to take notice of the palpable grafts of the Popes, and to beware of them; fight not for Tyranny, dye not for Pride, shew not lesse mercy to Christians, then you doe to Iewes and Turkes, embrew not your hands in the blood of Princes, with shame blush over that which is past, with horror prevent all such future practises; get your Pope to give satisfaction to all the world, for all former Treasons, to burne all seditious bookes, or else assure your selues whatsoeuer ye can colourably pretend to the world, an insamy sticks upon your Church, and your religion will be held as dangerous as corrupt. Thus out of ardent desire to procure safety to my Countrey and to get such blacke deformities wiped from the browes of all them that professe Christianitie, doe I offer these wholesome aduertisements to your duest and deepest considerations, beseeching God that your pistols, poisons, powders, may now be laid aside, and that ye may fall to workes answerable to true profession.

Yours so farre as true Christian Religion will suffer.

THO: REEVE

THE CHVRCHES HAZARD.

NEHEM. 4. II.

And our adversaries said, they shall neither know, nor see till wee come into the midst of them, and slay them, and cause the worke to cease.

He Church is a Particle of Heaven;
a quint-essence I am sure from this earth; Hortus inclusus a Garden enclosed, severed like Paradise from all the world; Gods Suburbs below; the Royall Citie above, the Suburbs below; that Sedes Beatorum, this Renatorum; that the Seate of the Glorified, this of the Sancti-

Cant. 4. 12.

fiad. He which made the whole world, reserved this one place to himselfe. Whether God dwell not here, let the shaking of his Scepter manifest; Iudicia iudicia, His iudge-

*Constituit. fa-bi locum unum
qui condidit ty-
niversum.*

The Churches Hazard.

b *Pagina au-
thorem suum
nunquam ta-
centes, Amb.
ep. lib. 10. ep. 84.*

c *Extingere
voluit, sed Deo
gratias non valuit. Bern.
ep. 2.*

d *Ramos con-
fregit, radices
non nocuit,
Chrys. hom.
10. de diuitiis
et paupere.
e Innumera
pestes Erebi.*

f *Reliquia Da-
maum, atque
immitis Achilles.*

g *Impiter ali-
sonans.*

h v. 1. 2.

i v. 3.

k v. 7. 8.

ments are testimonies. I can read God present amongst his people as well in the patent of his workes, as in the charter of his Scriptures; for b These are volumes that neuer conceale their author. How comes it that the Church hath stood all this while against the formidable rage of the world, but that it is a fenced Citie? It had long since beene made a ruinous heape, but that it is the Pallace of the great King. c The enemy of Sion would haue extinguished it, but God bee praised hee could not. d Hee brake of some of the branches but hee could not hurt the roote. From the mouthes of our aduersaries let vs bee resolved, whether this be not the Great Gods Station; for the deuises, designs haue beene many mischienous against it, yea e infinite Friends of Hell, haue beene busie, boysterous, for the demolishing of it, why preuailed they not? why were they defeated? Oh they fought stoutly, but God had the vpper ground of them, their swords were too short, and blunt to fight with the Almighty; they felt heere Digitum, a Finger more weighty and mighty then mans to oppose them; Euery succour then to the Church is a Character, and euery deliuerance an Oracle to euidence Gods presence amongst his people. How wonderfully did God here preferue Iudah, when danger was imminent? God I say, and not f the Re-liques of Babylons oppression; the strength of the captivity returned; no, God to shew the preheminance of his power, the prerogative of his Church. Let Iudah goe on to build the wall, to repaire the breaches of Ierusalem, their zeale is commendable, their paines acceptable; all awfull and laudable; yea the Deed is Gods, and the Defence shall bee Gods; Iudah is Gods Promoter, and hee will bee her Protector. g That great God, that can make the battlements of heauen to cracke, and the Axle-tree of the world to fall in pieces with his thunderbolts, takes vpon him the Patronage of Iudah. Let Sanballat h scorner and Tobiah i de-ride yea a Senate of wits meet together euen k Arabians, Ammonites, Asbdodites to consult, conspire about a worke of ruth and ruine, yet God will be a tutelar, safeguarding power.

For

For that is the purport of this sentence, it is rehearsed as a point of blisse when Indah lay at the bleeding point, if God had not helped they had beene helpelesse; helpelesse? yea liuelesse, for they had beene slaine, and their worke ceased before they had either knowen or seene. For our aduersaries said, They shall neither know nor see, till wee come into the midst of them, and slay them, and cause the worke to cease.

Our, stand here like a people seuered from all the Babylonians, they peculiar to God and hee to them, for hee is a friend though there bee Aduersaries; hee hath concluded no harme vnto them though they said it; hee had eyes ten thousand times brighter then the Sunne to discern their secretest practises, though they had thought to come vpon them before they should either know or see, they shall not touch the hemme of Gods garment, nor rase the skinne of his body, not come to the out-skirts of his people, though they thinke to come into the midst of them; Gods people are secured though they coniecture they should bee slaughtered, slayne; the conspiracie shall cease, though they suppose the worke shall cease. For our Aduersaries, &c.

Our, shew a company, and a company they had need to be, and well knit together, for they are a<sup>1</sup> hated stocke, they haue Aduersaries; and no commune Aduersaries but such as were full-bent vpon a wretched purpose, they had varied as it were vpon it, they had said; yea and close dangerous aduersaries, which would come vpon them in no manly sort, giue no warning of their wrath, send no open defiance of their displeasure, for then Indah might haue brought forth <sup>in</sup> colours alike and forces alike, but come vpon them before they shall either know, or see; neither will the refuse people satisfie them, no they would bee for the flower of the garland, for the most in signe, and illustrious, for the Mist and not ther to shew an angry brow on'y, or to pailey the reason of their distast, but to make haucke; to expresse their minds at the sword's point, a sharpe discouery of mens intentions; confodere, configere to wound to stab, to slay; and not onely so, but a greater spight is yet behind, to ouer-genuinū sum.

in pares equilas, & pilas minantia pila

throw the meanes of Gods service, to get a conquest vpon religion, or these people are strengthening themselves, say they in this holy Citie, they are reedifying the walls of Ierusalem, that their God might againe bee worshipped, well this holy attempt they would hinder; the Worke is the eyesore, and the Werke shall cease. Our Aduersaries said, &c.

In the Text consider.

A holy Congregation — Our.

A hellish opposition — Aduersaries.

A firme resolution — Sayd.

A cunning proiecting — They shall neither know, nor see.

A high attempt, — till wee come into the midst of them.

A mercilesse designe — and slay them.

A rancour against religion — And cause the Worke to cease.

Our.

First, for the Holy Congregation, Our. This word belongs not to a single soule, but to men vnited; they were scattered, but now they are reducted into one; in Babylon they lived apart, mourning in their secret, severall corners, to Iudah, they are now returned, and there they now speak with a voyce, like the voice of many waters, Our. Though before My aduersaries here, Thine there, This mans in another place, yet now, Our. The scattered stones of Sion are gathered together; the Saints are met; there is a Holy Congregation. From whence obserue, that the Churches freedome, is a remarkeable, vnspeakeable blessing; that she which remayned solitary, is come to her happy societies: Woe to the church when she is alone, Ioy to the Church in her troupes, the Church is then clad in her rich attire, yea decked like a Bride in her Nuptiall Ornaments, then the jewels are about her necke. The Church in persecution is sayd to be in the Clefts of the rocks, in the secret places of the stayres, desirous to looke out, and yet ashamed to be scene, her profession being in oppression, shee hides head, and shunnes company; not in the open streets, nor in the

Doct.

n Va soli
Eccles 4. 10.

O. Monilia
circa collum.
p. 2. Cant. 14.

the market place doth she take her turne, but in the clefts of the rockes, in the secret places of the stayres; not but that shee then is, but not conspicuous; she wants not internall entity, but externall felicity: But a Church flourishing, is the Saints eye-pleasure, the worlds amazement, <sup>9</sup> terrible, like an army with Banners. For an army with Banners displayed, not more goodly to be beheld, then the Church with her ranckes filled. <sup>1</sup> Give me children, or else I dye saith Rachel, so give me my multitudes saith the Church, or else I languish; shee is then like a <sup>1</sup> Vine shaken with a berry here and there, in the out-most boughes. The lustre of a Church is gone, when Gods Courts are not filled, and Ierusalem, the mother of vs all, seemes to be in her Widdow-hood, when many of her children are not at her knees, professing their faith, praising their God. See the luctuous, dolorous state of the Saints, when the Church is in this distresseful plight. <sup>1</sup> The wayes of Sion doe lament, because none come to the solemne feastes, all her gates are desolate, her Priestes sigh, her virgins are afflicted, and she in bitterness. Solemne feastes, but no solemne appearance, the gates open, but desolate for want of company; Oh what a brow of anguish is there then euery where discerned? the Priestes sighing, the Virgins afflicted, and shee in bitterness. But change this state, and what a change of carriage is there then to be seene? all glee, and triumph, recreation, and ravishment to behold the Church in her excellency, eminency, glory. David describing this state, doth it with most passionate, affectionate termes of exultation; <sup>1</sup> It is well seene Oh God, how thou goest, how thou my God and King goest in the Sanctuary, The singers goe before, the Minstrels follow after, and in the midst are the damosels playing with their timbrels. Then the Church is compassed about with her noyse of musitians; not waylers, there lamenters, here deplorers in the midst, but singers before, minstrels following after, and in the midst damosels playing with their timbrels. This is Sanctuary jubilation, Gods going in Majestie vpon earth. It is well seene how thou goest, how thou my God and King goest in

9 6. Cant. 4.

1 Gen. 30. 1.

1 Eccl. 17. 6.

1 Lam. 4.

1 Psal. 68.

24, 25.

* Facem praefert Iren.

x Ecce Luna, ecce ubi est.
Aug tract. in I ep Ioan
y Apparet Deus & loquitur cum sanctis Amb. lib. 2. c. 7. de Iacob.

Vse.

z Exoptatus dies omnium votis venit Cyp. lib. de lapsis.

*the Sanctuary, How ! that is, how Magnifically, like a Prince in Irisne. There is not a more delectable spectacle vpon earth, then the face of a Church visible; then the Church, * Carrys a torch before her, not creepes vp and downe in the darke, but carrieth torch-light in her hand; yea, though before no man knew where she was, but held her for lost, yet then they come foorth, and out of joy of heart, and iucundity of spirit, point at her, as at the Moone in the firmament. * Behold the Moone, Behold where shee is; the eclipse is gone, the wayne is past, Behold the Moone, Behold where shee is.* The Church with her Congregations about her, make Gods family to be in it's splendor, then y God yeelds an appearance of himselfe, and vouchsafes to haue familiar parley with his Saints. O joyous thing to haue but a sight as it were of Gods bright brow in his house, and to heare but the sound of his lippes going in his family, where there is an vnity, as they termed it of collection, not a Logicall, but a kind of transcendentall Vnity, an Vnitie no other then an Vniuersalitie, Our. This serues to reprove them which doe so little rejoyce in the happy estate of the Church, or if rejoyce, I am sure are not transported. The Church is visible, but not their spirituall delight, and comfort for the same visible; their hearts spring not, their tongues chaunt not. God had ferventer affections in the time of the Churches triall, then in the time of the Churches triumph. Our forefathers then wished for Stons prosperity, with groanes in their brests, teares in their eyes; they wisht for it, and z The day longed for of all is come; We their children enjoy it, enjoy it, but ioy not in it, blesse not God for the happy fruition of it. Our religion is not in bondage, but whether the gratitude of most be not, I leaue it to judgement. God hath vnlockt his gates vnto vs, set open his Courts, but we come not into his gates with thanksgiuing, nor into his Courts with praise. I see many professors, but few confessors, that confesse the pretiousnesse of Gods favours vnto vs. Are these the flourishing times of Religion? it appeares not by our devotion. Where are they that are as if they they dreamed, in a holy traunce, to see our Captivity returned like the Rivers in the South; to behold the blisse of the times? no we see the Sponse with her threescore Queenes, and fourescore Concubines, and the damosels without number attending her, but we do not count her Blessed. Oh how deserue they to have persecution againe that know not what it is to have freedome, and to have the Altars of God broken downe amongst them, that doe not bind the sacrifices with cordes to the hornes of the Altar. Oh therefore <sup>a</sup> where <sup>a</sup> Vbi b. nef- cium ibi sit of- ficium. Amb. the happy blessing is manifest, there let the dutifull acceptance of it be apparent; Let your eyes bee dazeled with the bright beames of the light of the Gospel, and your eares glow with the sweete charmes of saluation. If it be comfortable to you to enter into Gods Tabernacles; into Gods Tabernacles about your seled parlours, into Gods Tabernacles about the palaces of Princes, then cry out bo how amiable are thy Tabernacles thou Lord of hosts! Know the difference betweene Babylons thraldome, and Judahs liberty, ye have not now single soules, or a few private persons, but a Congregation; Yea, <sup>c</sup> There is a white band of Christians <sup>c</sup> Ad est mili- tum cohors candida. Cyp. de lapsis. Souldiers to magnifie God, to maintaine profession. We are in our multitudes, Ovr.

Adversaries.

Now let vs come to the Hellish opposition, Adversaries, Doct. Ovr., had a companie, and Adversaries hath a company; <sup>d</sup> Io. 15 19. company against company. From whence observe, that <sup>e</sup> Nigros cor- roditi viridi- vngues Mar- tial. the Church must resolve vpon Opposites. <sup>d</sup> The world loves her owne, and God forbid we should be her Owne to be loued of her; no, <sup>e</sup> The envious bites his blacke nayles against vs, we may see his malice at his fingers ends. <sup>f</sup> Betweene Babilon <sup>f</sup> Inter Babi- lonem, & Ie- rusalem nulla pax sed guerra continua Ber- ter 2. de pug- nific. and Ierusalem there is no peace, but continuall variance, Yea, <sup>g</sup> Quanta ab exteris passa est. Id ser. 29. How many things does the Church suffer of them that are with- out? They are without, and so in battell array against them that are within; they are Without, and so let them which are within stand vpon their guard. How should the Church be Militant, if she had no standards set vp against her? The devill would cease to be an enemy if he should raise vp no h Avt.

i Quod Christiiani nomine gaudet, et gloriatur ad
punendum
commotus es.
Niceph. Call
Ecc. hist. lib. 3.
c. 33.

Use.

k Serò recusat
iugum ferre
quod subie-
dit. Sen.

l Iug. 16.

m Ad pugnas
et pugnam
accingamur.
Chrys. 1. ad Ro.
in Iudaeos.
n Sueton.

oppugners; when can the seede of the woman bee in a sore league with the seede of the Serpent? when can Christ bee dearly affected of Antichrist? no he is Against, his malice is written in his browes, looke for no benovolent affections from him. Superstition is the professed opposite of truth, whosoever carrieth in his mouth the name of a false God, proclaimes deadly feaud to all Gods true followers, as Laci- us told Vrbinius for condemning of good Ptolomeus, Because he reioyceth, and glorieth in the name of a Christian, therefore thou setteest thy selfe to punish him. Wee must expect no sincere affection from infidels, or Misbelievers, no they are Ban-dogges to the Church; no friends to God, and so our Adversaries. This serves to stirre vs up to heedinesse; Adversaries they are, and on that we should count them friends; Will the Lambe sit downe, to rest quietly, when the Wolfe jawes are open? Will the Keepers of the Vineyard be reck- lesse in their charges, when the Foxes are round about the hedge? Have they once malice vs, and will they be no lon- ger mischieuous? Yes, hardly can any man desist from those courses he hath beene inured to. Wee haue beene once in perill by these Adversaries, then how ought wee still to be in dread? They are still Adversaries, and so still infesters, molesters; the flame may bee put out, but the aymers are still remaining; though like the vncleane spirit in the Gos- pell, they haue beene once dispossessed; yet if they should find the roome swept and garnished for them, they would returne with seuen spirits worse then themselves; shall wee not thinke them fully to be Adversaries, till we haue tasted of vyne by them? If we should dreame of tranquillity, I am sure there is no security, they that haue once bent their swords against our throats, we should doe ill to sleepe qui- etly by their sides. Up Sampson, the Philistines are upon thee. Let vs be prepared for buffets and blowes. Look in enuies jaw-bones; and see if there be any white-teeth in her mouth, stand at the threshold of malice, and listen if there bee any parley of peace in the house; no as the Priest tolde Galba, Looke to thy selfe for the Blood-suckers are not farre

*o Sint exculia, ne sint exu-
via.*

Sayd: .

t Prou. 27. 17.

Vse.

u Cohibet vires
ingeniumque pudor. Ouid.

Doct.

* Gravis est
illis fortuna quibus est re-
pentina:
the Poë of Germanicus.

x Cum vincere
aperte, Non datur, insidias
armaque testa
parant.

Calamitas
abstrusa illece-
brosa fallacia.

Cyp lib. 1.

cp 2

z Fur of Fur-
vns.

they bind them to it by a ſolemne covenant of their lippes, it is ſayd, and ſo not afterwards to be gain-ſaid, no man muſt ſpeake againſt it, deſiſt from it, for his promiſe is out to the contrary; that it might be ſetled, it is ſayd, Our aduerſaries ſayd. This ſerues to exhort all perſons to carry in their boſomes mollified hearts, and tender conſciences to quake at ſinne; for if mens hearts come to be ſtupified, and their conſciences cheualriſed, what villany are they not fit for? whileſt u ſhametaſtneſſe remaines in man, it reſtraynes both power and wit in euill things; but if the cheekes haue once loſt modeſty, and the conſcience remorse, the blacke face, and deformed viſage of the moſt nefarious, horrid intendment will not terrifie them, no not ſo much as make them blaſh; be it a piacle, and moſt execrable offence, yet they retract not from it, but deuouer themſelues vnto it, Say, Our Aduerſaries ſayd.

Now let vs come to the cunning projecting, They ſhall neither know nor ſee. From hence obſerue, that there is no miſchiefe like to the ſecret. * Thoſe accidents are griuous which are ſudden, v unexpected, vnſuſpected dangers, how difficult are they to be auoyded? a cloſe villany is an ambuſhment, a latitant foe, a pitfall, the hand of miſchiefe hath giuen the blow before it was knowne to be liſt vp, the ſnare is on the heele before it was diſcerned to be layd, the poyſon is in the throate before it bee ſcene what manner of liquor it be, yet theſe are the priuy practiſes of the wicked, their attempſ clandestine, they ſerue vnder the Prince of darkeneſſe, and therefore they loue to doe all in darkeneſſe: knowledge they thinke would make their actions abhorrid, and therefore their actions are couert; x when they cannot openly deſtroy, they prepare treacheries and engines of craft, y there is a flattering face of a hidden calamity. A thiete they ſay comes of a word that ſignifieth z darke, becauſe he takes the opportunity of darkeneſſe, to accompliſh his ends, ſo theſe by ſtealthiue, ſurreptitious courſes, put in practiſe their deſignes. Datilah will ſhaue off Sampſons ſeuen locks, before ſhe tell him of any Philiftins, ſo theſe take away all ſtrength before the forehead of an aduerſary be diſcerned; cerned; looke for no Worthies here, for they shun light, nor for any signall of battell to be giuen, for they trust more to their projects then their prowesse, <sup>a</sup> They would shoot secretly at the vpright in heart, <sup>b</sup> They lurke like Lyons in their dens. So that Archers, and Lyons they are; Archers, but no noone-day, but mid-night Archers, or Archers that would shoot in a cloud; and Lyons they are, but lurking ones, not roaring in the fields, but watching in their dens. Cain doth not challenge the field of Abel, no <sup>c</sup> walke into the field with Abel, like a brother, not like a butcher, yea, Abels blood is shed, before Cains malice seene. Ioab embraced Amasa; though embruing be his purpose, yet embracing is his practise; he embraces till Amasa fals dead out of his armes; he cries not Estne pugna? come shal we try our valour? but <sup>d</sup> Estne pax? Is it Peace? and thus with a sword hid in the scabberd of peace, doth he strike him into the fift rib that he died; is this captaine-like? no caritiffe-like. Go fetch the child that I may <sup>e</sup> Worship him, <sup>e</sup> Mat. 2. 8, saith Herod. Herod it seemes would become very deuout, but let not the Wisemen trust him, for then he will make them loose the title of Wisemen, yea, make Babes of the Wisemen, for Herods purpose is not <sup>f</sup> to Worship, but to worry. And thus the Churches Aduersaries loue to doe all in obscurity, <sup>f</sup> Non seruire sed scuire, their chiefe prop is subtilty; & Noble praise, high honour, <sup>g</sup> Raulins, ser 3. in Innocent. Egregiam vero laudem, no doubt: All men may see they are giuen to ignominious courses, which would do such things, as till they be effected, men should neither know nor see; they are all for surprisals, to take men on the suddaine, that men might be wrecked before warned, and they might be felt as Aduersaries before they be either knowne, or seene. From hence I might cast shame vpon the faces of our Aduersaries, for how may all the world take notice of them to be but base-spirited, whose chiefe engine is craft? it seemes they are ashamed of their God, which cannot be helped but by such priuie practises. But vpon this I will not stand, onely from <sup>h</sup> hence let me exhort you all to cleaue close to God, for if he watch not for vs, wee are like to fall into sudden dangers from such subtil enemies. Oh that the perils of the Nah Heb. 4 13.

tion should be so many, and the prouocations of the Nation so rife, that wee seeke not by reuerence, and obedience, to keepe Gods eye vpon vs, to search out the purposes, and to discern the practises of the wicked against vs. <sup>h</sup> All things are naked before him, but many things are hid from vs. Therefore seeing wee cannot watch sufficiently for our selues, let vs get God to keepe vigils for vs; wee had neede to keepe him sure, or else we are not sure of safety. Our Aduersaries haue secret projects in hand, not bruited in our streets, nor hung vp vpon our City gates, but privily contriued, they would be vpon vs before wee should either know or see. Our Aduersaries sayd, they shall neither know nor see.

Till we come into the midst of them.

Doct.

i Sueton.

k Vniuersos
promouit vt
non peccatus, non inimicorum la-
tera, sed faci-
em oculisque
gladiis, ac telis impeterent. In his Pharsalian warre against Pompey, Plut.
l Plut.
W/o.

Now let vs come to the high attempt: They are for the Midst. Till wee come into the Midst of them. From hence obserue that the ambition of the Aduersaries is at the Grandies, that not a few poore abiects might endure the smart of their power but the chiefeest liners, that as <sup>i</sup> Caligula would haue men so to be flaine that they might know themselves to dye, so these would bee Authors of such a misery, as it might be felt to be a misery, they would be in the midst to bee in the midst of mischiefe, that as Julius Caesar commanded his souldiers to fight at the eyes of his enemies, so these would fight at the Eyes of the Countrey, that these being strooke cut, the rest of the body might not know how to guide it selfe; the cropping of ordinary hearbes in the Garden will not serue their turnes, no they are for striking off the heads of the tallest poppies in the Garden, as <sup>i</sup> Tarquinius the proud was; Let Nehemiah heere and his chiefe followers bee laid hand on, and the spirits of the rest will soone faile; command the Midst, and Master of all. This serues to exhort Great men to bee great Promoters of religion, not to excell more in the fame of their descents, then in the seruour of their deuotions; not only to looke to be great Wonders in their Countrey, but great Beauties to the Church.

Church. For Rich men, Nenters? Great men, Atheists? Am I in the bosomes of none? The Country complains her ancient Gentry is decayed, the Church complains her religious Gentry is decayed; their Fore-fathers bowed their knees to God, and they to their Paramours; that means which the one spent in almsdeeds, and the maintenance of the Gospell, the other spend in pride, and riot. Are there none that in steed of being Great Ornaments to their Countrey are Great Botches, or Great Burthens to their Countrey? their Greatnesse serving them to no other end, but either to bee a shelter for licentiousnesse, or a club to dash out the braines of pouerty with? Some there are I know, that stand vpon their true termes of honour; that as their Christian names are set before their sir-names, so they preferre piety before gentry: And oh let all be thus addicted, and that euen for the very perill greatnesse stand in. For Aduersaries there are, and at whom are their aimes? the Infimates? no, the Potentates; the loftier the pedigree, the greater foment of their malice; at their high blood, are their high aims; whatsoeuer these simple soules may endure, yet the gentle spark is he whom they would quench,<sup>m</sup> which hath the race of famous Beau-peeres to illuster his stocke. <sup>m Cui genus & proavis ingens.</sup> The Aduersaries loue to ruffle the purples, to giue a Rent in scarlet, to twitch at the golden chaines, to enter in at the painted portals. Greatnesse is their eye-marke, they would bee in the Mist. Our Aduersaries said, they shall neither know, nor see till wee come into the Midst of them.

And slay them.

Now let vs come to the mercilesse designe, And slay them. <sup>Deff.</sup> From whence obserue that nothing, but Bloodshed can truly satisfie the Aduersaries of the Church; they come not to make sport, but spoyle, not to fray, but to Slay; not to marke out enemies, but to massacre them; not to plead the right of a quarrell, but to subdue, subuert; they bring <sup>n Iacula mortis fera, Ps. 7.</sup> Weapons of death along with them, they are men thoroughly armed. Did yee neuer see the mouth of enuy open? Heare what dread-

*Diglutiamus
eos, ps 124.
p Dissipamus
eos de gente,
Ps 83.
q Exinanite,
exinanite, Ps.*

† Ἀπολλύω
Rev 9.11.

*Oh quam nobi-
le factum.
Plut.
† Vt expirantium facies videret. Suet.*

Vse.

u Notus feritate Lycæon.

* *Deus dicit Homicida est,
Et tu ad illum
tanquam ad
medicum cur-
ris? Chryorat. 5. in Ju-dæos.*

full menaces she sends forth; ° Let vs swallow them vp quick;
P Let vs scatter them from being a Nation, q Downe with them, Downe with them euen to the ground. Haue not the Aduersa- ries, thinke yee, wide throats that can swallow vp men quicke? Doe they not carry a whirle wind in their lips, that can scatter men from being a Nation? are they not perntious Artisans, yea some of Sathans dismantlers ( who is called the † Destroyer) that neuer cease till they come to the ground-worke? yet this is the mercilesse rage of the Churches Aduersaries, Desolation, Destruction is that they aime at; their swords they thinke neuer shine bright, till they glister with the blood of the Saints; they are not worthy. they suppose to bee counted Aduersaries, vlesse they can sacrifice to their Dagon a fat burnt offering of Professors corpses. Howling is their melody, firing of Cities, breaking of Scepters, casting downe Thrones, dying the stones of the streets in crimson is their pleasurable object; that as Sylla filled a poole of blood, and then set his hands by his sides, and cryed out, Oh what a noble act haue I done; and as Claudius killed men only that hee might see how fine a thing it was for men † to breath out the last gaspe; So these exercise all sort of barbarous sauagenesse, and count it but their recreation. the perfection of their Religion; they meditate vpon Slaying. This serues to shew vs what kindnesse wee are to expect from our Aduersaries, what but bloodshed? I know not whether thy life bee deere vnto thee, but sure I am this is that they deerely thirst for. " The enemy of profession is knowen well enough in his cruelty, Christendome hath his dolefull pictures hanging vp in euery corner. There are some happily that care not if the Aduersaries were now in the Midst of vs, for begin they not to palliate their dealings, to collaud their courses? yea euen to censure them, that thinke hardly of them? Oh what are such but Sicophants, assentatory spirits? they extoll Crocodiles, magnifie Vipers; * Does God tell vs they are murderers, and shall we hold them as Phisitians? hath God marked them out as Aduersaries, and shall

shall wee esteeme them men of mercy? no I say God keepe vs out of their furies, or els sure I am we haue seene our best dayes, so soon as they preuaile our Kingdome euen giues vp the Ghost; a truculent, sanguinary people are they, giuen to slaughter; as heere, Our Aduersaries said, they shall neither know nor see, till wee come into the Midst of them, and slay them.

And cause the Worke to cease.

Now let vs come to the rancour against Religion. And cause the Worke to cease. As if they should say this Citie they count the holy Citie, this they are now fortifying that they might sacrifice, worship; well this we will hinder, this frustrate, And cause the Worke to cease. From Dott. whence obserue, that the free exercise of Religion is an excruciation, a prime grienance to the Aduersaries. For let that bee suppressed, and then they are quiet, but let that haue any liberty, and then their hearts gnaw them, their galls flow ouer, and they are ready to fall out into any outrages; <sup>x</sup> Yee shall bee hated of all men for my names sake. <sup>x</sup> Mat. 10 22.
<sup>y</sup> Christ alone is the cause of all hatred, and persecution. <sup>y</sup> Christus solus causa omnis odij & persecutionis. <sup>Musc.</sup> As they are men they can bee at peace with them, but as they are Christians they detest them. Caius Scius (said the Heathens once) is a good man, euill onely because a Christian: So <sup>lus</sup> that if men weare the open cognifance of Christianity, if there bee a cleere brow of profession seene, it is enough to set all the world in a tumult against them; as sore eyes cannot endure the brightnesse of the Sunne, so superstition cannot endure the light of the truth. If the Woman be clothed with the Sunne, and haue the Moone vnder her feet, and a crowne of twelue stars vpon her head, let her looke to her selfe, it will not be long before the great red Dragon will lift vp his seuen heads, and ten hornes, and persecute her into the wilderness; <sup>b</sup> as the noyse of timbrels make Tigers run mad, so the melodious sound of profession make the maligners of the Church to rage; they cannot cease, till the work cease. This teaches vs how highly we ought to esteem

*Non est res
parua quam sic infectantur
hostes. Bern. ser.
31.*

d Mat. 6. 21.

of religion; that is most pretious that is most maliced, <sup>e</sup> it cannot bee no small matter, that the enemies are so offended with. Our aduersaries spleene may teach vs the excellency of our Religion; they most enuy it, therefore wee ought most to prize it; Religion aboue birth, aboue goods, aboue life. Oh that thou shouldst valew any thing, and vilifie Religion! no, <sup>d</sup> Where the treasure is, there let the heart bee also: bee not recklesse, or remisse wherby the deuotions of it be slacked, or the purity of it corrupted; contemne all things about thee, rather then Religion. That ought most to rejoyce thee, because it most teenes the Aduersaries; it is the grand incentiue of their distast, the vpsshot of their malice; the hindring of the Work they aime at more, then at the slaughter of the persons. For our Aduersaries said, they shall neither know, nor see, till wee come into the midst of them, and slay them, and cause the Work to cease.

*e Thebis leta
dies adest, Aras
tangite suppli-
ces, pingues ca-
dite victimas.
Senec.*

*f Hoc, hoc mi-
nistro noster v-
tatur dolor.
Senec.*

Thus haue I told you a story out of Iudah, and is it not the viue Image of our owne Country? were they in danger, and were not wee at an exigent? What was this but the most fatall, extiall day that euer was appointed for our Nation? It should haue beene Englands autumnne, Romes springtide; Englands Vespers, Romes Mattens; Englands Exequies, Romes Festiuall: They began to cry out with them in the Tragedy, <sup>e</sup> Rome thy joyfull day is at hand, once let vs sing high Masse, and make a fat sacrifice of the Protestants. They had a long time cursed vs at Rome, and they saw wee waxed neuer the leaner; they told the world in their Councels, and Controuersies that we were Heretickes, and they saw their word would not be taken, for we shewed Christendome the true Hereticke in the Conclave; these coursethey saw would take no place, therefore they would fall to other practises; the penne they saw could doe no good, therefore they would try what policy could doe; ay, <sup>f</sup> This, this is the onely medicine for our griened minds. Conspiracy is the Popes onely weapon, treason the last refuge of Rome: They had oftentryed what their Gun-powder would doe aboue ground, and they euer found it flashed backe in their

their faces; the blisters were still to bee seene in Spaines cheekes, therefore they will try what their Gun-powder will doe vnder ground; their Saint Peter falls to Salt-peeter, a Cracke with that they thinke should make the heart strings of the Land to breake, and of the world to tremble; they had spent so much Gun-powder vpon vs before that their Indies were almost wasted, well they will now be at lesse charge, 36 barrels shall worke the feate; what, England that was held before even impregnable, now to be conquered with 36 barrels of Gunpowder? Yes, if a place convenient can be but found out; and may wee not let these men alone to chuse their advantages? Well, what shall the project be, to winne Dover Castle? no, that had too tough walls for such scant provision; what then, to be Masters of the Tower? no, there were too many roaring Watchmen vpon the walls to drive them from that attempt; what then, to destroy the Vniuersities? no, that they knew would haue stood them in small stead, learning now so abounding, that they should haue found an Vniuersity all over the Kingdom; what then, to blow vp Tiburne? that indeede they spighted much, because it had quartered many of their Traytors; yet they considered, that that pluckt downe, there was more Timber to haue been gotten in England; what then, to batter downe the Princes Pallace? that indeede had beene something, yet there they should haue wanted some of their Adversaries: the project therefore in conclusion was for the Parliament; if wee know not where the strength of our Land lay, our Adversaries can shew vs; where but in the Parliament? and not in this openly to assault, but secretly to blow vp; a Parliament was gathered together, and Rome would haue dismissed it with a stratagem; an abrupt manner of breaking vp, they would haue dissolved it with Gunpowder; broken vp, blowne vp; England gave the summons, and Rome would haue given the writ of departure. Could this plot haue beene so layd, that it might haue come from above, a man would haue thought it had beene Heavens-blow, the stroke of God; but the Papists haue no power above, all their strength lies beneath, it had come but from Hell, it had beene but the veny of the Deuill. The Papists say they would faine bring vs to Heaven, but then the force of their courtesie lies in puffing of vs vpthither with Gunpowder; as for all their Engines of Doctrines, they doe but push downe, strike to hell. I have read that in Rome there was once via sacra a Holy way, shall I thinke that still remaining? no, I rather beleeeve there is Via sanguinea, a bloody way. They say their Images have sweate blood, and that they have found blood in the Sacrament, let them talke of those miracles as long as they will, so long as they worke not this miracle to make a Kingdome sweet blood. But this they would doe, yea this they had done, if God had not wrought a Miracle, to make Tiberne sweate blood in stead of the Parliament; wee lay at the point of death, and the Papists were comming with this plot as extreme vnction to send vs out of the world with; For, for the State to have received the stab, and Religion the stifle, was as this day determined, decreed. Our Adversaries had said they shall neither know nor see till we come into the midst of them, and slay them, and cause the worke to cease. Give me leave to runne short descant vpon my Text, and to fit every parcell according to the prelent occasion.

Our.

Were wee not at this time gathered together into companies? was there not the face of a Holy Congregation, a Church visible amongst vs? Yes, Babylons yoke not long before had beene vpon our neckes, since the dayes of Queene Mary the grasse was scarce growne, where their flames had beene; they needed then no barrells of Gunpowder, their pitch-barrells and faggots serued the turne; yet I say at this time our captivity was ended, and our Church come to a most fulged estate; for by the comming of that famous Queene Elizabeth to her Throne; Elizabeth indeede, the oath of God, or the fithnesse of God, sworne to his cause, replenished with his heavenly endowments; shee, who who was as a polished corner in Gods Temple, as a golden pot of Mannah in his Sanctuary, the Orient pearle of the Christian world, yea the Bright starre of the Earth in her dayes. Oh whom should I recount thee to be, as incompa- Ob quam te rable, as invincible; not greater in the conquest of her ene- memorem!

 mies, then the peerelesnesse of her vertues; the Queene of England by her title, of the world by her desert; & Who be- g Heb. II.
 ing dead yet speaketh; whose memory is written in the hearts of her subjects, the best Chronicle; a virgin, and yet the Grandame of Honour; a Woman, and yet a h Terror of h Terror
Ter-magants; which paid her souldiers with the gold of Achiv.
India, and made Cadiz the tiring-roome of her Captaines; which turned an invincible Armado into a Sea-bonfire, and made 88. like a Climactericall yeare to the state of Spaine; which in her dayes for her Princely deportment, seemed the Master peece of Royall perfections, and for her manifold preservations, the Miracle of Gods providence; whose government was throughout glorious, not like the Reignes of some Princes that wee read of in other Histories, whose governments have proved to their subject, like the seasons of the yeare, a cheerefull spring at first, a comfortable Summer afterwards, but at last a fearefull lease-fall, and a nipping Winter; or like Nebuchadnezzars Image, the head i Dan. 3.
 of gold, the breast of silver, but downewards nothing but brasfe, iron, and clay; as Nero who for k five yeares was no- k Ad quin- table in his government, and Caligula of whom Suetonius quennium.
 thus reports, Hitherto I have written, as of a Prince, but after- Suet.
 wards I must write as of a Monster; But as for her, the scap- l Hactenus ter fell out of her hands with honour, her last yeares being quasi de Prin- as famous as her first, her people blessing their selves that cipe, reliqua they dyed before her, because they left so vertuous a Prince ut de monstro behind them, as it was said of the Subjects in the dayes of narranda sunt.
Augustine; which lived with more Majestie, and dyed with more teares then any of her Predecessours in a thousand yeares before her; which deserved a tombe of gold at her death, as Constantine the Great had; and to have had Statues set vp in her honour in every house, as Marcus

m Gaudet v.
nusquifine
Angelorum
tantum onus tangere. Chry.
hom 15. de
diuit. & pau-
pere.

a Vas sanguinis decreta
mala emenda-
vit. Platina
o Iudg. 5.7.

Aurelius had after his departure; whose Sepulcher, (and ah that I should speake off her Sepulcher) is the monument of euerlasting renowne, more to bee regarded with all due respect, then any of the Paynims vrnes, or the Popish shrines; whose name is the joy of our hearts, the Triumph of our tongues; which can scarce to this day bee pronounced without panting brefts, and dropping eyes; whose body is gone to sleepe in a bed of safe repose, whose soule is in the Chauntry of Heauen, for <sup>m</sup> Every one of the Angels desired to catch, to carry such a burthen to God. Shee I say, for Femineo generi tribuantur. All these blessings of the Church are to bee attributed to her, as the happy restorer of them; Illa Ecclesia scintilla, shee, the bright Sparke of the Church warmed vs, when wee were almost frozen to death in that brumall season of Popery, and like a good Surgeon stanchd our dropping veines, when they were almost left empty of blood; shee brake the yoke of Egyptian bondage, led vs through the red Sea of prepared dangers, seated vs in the land of promise, fed vs with the honey and milke of Evangelicall truth, brought home the Arke of God with Triumph, and set our Church like a Citie vpon a hill; as Aniasthutha, that renowned Queene, who followed Theodoricus that vessell of blood, <sup>a</sup> mended all the cruell decrees; So this renowned Priresse remoued all the sharpe statutes, and the shadow of her Throne proued a shadow of refreshing to the Professours of Religion. <sup>o</sup> Surrexi ego Deborah, Surrexi ego mater in Israele; I Deborah arose, I arose a mother in Israel. A step-mother wee seemed to haue before, a naturall mother now; fourtie fower yeares nourcing vp her subjects with the brefts of sincere profession: And her successour prouing a successour of her faith, as well as her Throne: King James memorable for his wisedome, and graces, confirmed this happinesse vnto vs; in so much that Paradise seemed not fuller of pleasant fruits, then wee of faithfull Protestants; not a scattered flock were we at this time, but a fold well filled, wee were in our multitudes. Our

Aduersaries.

Next Aduersaries. And who are Aduersaries to vs, if not Romes squint-eyed brood ; they are Papists, wee Protestants, and as the saying was of old, P Dost looke that Quintilian should be loued? Quintilian, that was the Oratour against the vices of the times ; so dost looke that any Protestant, that hath laid open the nakednesse of the whore of Babylon should be tendered by her Followers? no as Fabritius enuied all that Marcus Aurelius did: so we must looke for nothing but the spirit of contradiction, and contention in all our passages. G Ganius the Arrian because S. Chrysostome had stopped his mouth, burst out into tyranny : So because we haue gagged the obstreperous throate of Romanists, that they cannot so risly, or succesfully belch out their Doctrine of Devils amongst vs, they swell with malice against vs ; yea they haue sacrificed in hatred against our cause, as it is reported of Caligula, that he sacrificed to Enuy : Marke Rome, and see if it be an auspicious planet to our Church, no it lookes with malignant aspects ; I will looke for honey in the nests of Dragons, as soone as for affection in the followers of Antichrist ; their Vatican is the Councell-chamber of mischief to vs, the Popes keyes are but picklockes to our state ; It was neuer well with Christian states, since Popes came to weare Triple Crownes ; what hath hee to doe with Crownes? the Phrygian Miter that Syluester 1. wore vpon the cold Mountaine of Soracte, would become him well enough ; when Popes come to weare Triple Crownes, then oh yee Christian Princes your Crownes shake on your heads ; but why a Triple Crowne? a Triple jest ; that his Followers might thinke they could want no meanes vnder such a Diadem'd head? or wherefore else? where is hee King? of Pasquius poste, the Lady Ioanes porphiry Chayre? and the Curtifans stewes, where like a Prince hee takes tribute? I know no other Kingdomes he hath, vnlesse I would credit some Iesuits, who say hee is King of Heauen, Earth, and Purgatory ; as

*P expellat
ut Quintilian
nam ametur.*

*q Ganius Ari.
ann quod os
suum obtura-uerat Chry-sostomus, cepit tyrannidem exercere. E-rasm. in vita
Chrys.*

r Plat.

*Constantines donation pro-
ued to be ridiculous.*

f Genius Euan-
gelii, Calvin.
 ad Regem Gallia.

for Heauen indeed (though Rome boast of many miracles) yet I neuer read, nor heard, that God sent him downe a Crowne from heauen; for Earth strange it is that Christ (whose Vicar the Pope pretends to be) neuer woare crowne but that which was put vpon him in scorne, a Crowne of Thornes, and yet that the Pope must haue his browes filleted: as for Purgatory indeed, that is a Newfoundland, and if the world were well rid of Popes, it were no matter if there bee woare a Crowne. But in the meane time till this doubt bee resolved, by what right the Pope comes by his Triple Crowne, I am sure of the ruth that hath followed vpon it: triple woe is threatned to all them, that will not yeeld obedience to the Triple Crowne: wee like not of his pride, then the proud man waxes peeuish, and terrical to all them that will not approue of him: The Church of Rome is the Fiend, and Fury to haunt the Gospell; the Protestants Little-ease: I know not whether all amongst vs will count these Aduersaries, but sure I am that they are they that once chayned vs vp in the botome of their lothsome prisons, and burnt our bodies to ashes, they left vs no other visibility of our Church but Martyrdome, nor no other monuments of our Religion, but such as were fetched from their flaming stakes, they suppressed our writings, deprived vs of our liues, and suffered none but their owne sworne Scribes to bee pen-men of histories, and then, askt vs where was our Church before Luther: Are these friends courtesies? I know not, let brainicke lymphaticke, bewitched, befotted persons led away with an assentatory, or an abderitious spirit conceit them to bee Friends, but sure I am when time was they were such deere Friends as made vse of their time, and vse of our blood: therefore for my part I see the enemies eye in their heads, the gall of Aspes in their bosomes, Aduersaries they are: Our, and Our Aduersaries.

Sayd.

Next, Sayd. And oh that it should be sayd, that Rome should not say, to anything! what the intrepid men of the earth earth, and not hardy to any enterprife? They scotch at a milchiefe? and be faint-hearted in any pestilent pernicious deuise? Let them serue no longer vnder Antichrist, who is sayd to be a man of an impudent countenance, as if he could blush for nothing; their Master can infuse courage into them, they shall merit by it; and when he that sits in the chayre, will thus authorise, countenance sinne, and lay down hire aforehand, euen to put them into his Rubricke, to record them in his Kalender for Saints (the highest preferment these men looke for) what villany will not our Adversaries undertake. <sup>a Plutarchi</sup> Scipio sayd, that if he bade his soldiers throw downe themselves from the toppes of a rocke, they would not refuse it: So these men will throw downe themselves into the bottome of hell at the Popes command. Here was an action odious, horrible enough, yet was it not Sayd? Yes, they had bound themselves vnto it by oath; and taken Sacrament vpon it; Romes oathes! Romes Sacraments! oathes, the spring-heads of conspiracy; Sacraments, the broad scales of treason: Now then beeing thus mortified in mischief, what can ye looke for, but pertinacy in the worke. Excordes? no, Effrontes; heartlesse? no browlesse in it; feruid and vigorous, that it might have beene dispatched, two yeeres space could not rebate their edge, nor make their hearts relent from this horrid enterprife, with joynt consent, and vnchangeable purpose, doe they settle themselves to it: when Faux was apprehended, and examined, whether it touched not his conscience to bee the Actor of such a wretched intendment, hee answered like a man steeped in Romes Loas, that it repented him of nothing, but that it was not executed; so that this was not some floating conceit, or twinning resolution, but as solemnly concluded and obstinately vowed vnto, as euer was any thing; it was decreed, it was Sayd, Our Adversaries sayd.

They shall neither know nor see.

Next, They shall neither know nor see. This is the point of cunning, and doubt not of that to be there, when Rome

Rome is the Schoole-mistriffe of subtilty, the very Accademy of hellish pollicy; where Iesuits are Tutors, the Pupils cannot but bee subdalous; If ye would have a snare to bee layd, send for these crafts-masters; they are the expert cunning Artizans of the world, versed, exercised in all vertute, fraudulent courses. Would ye haue a taste of their subtilty? there needes no more to relish your palates, then the remembrance of this dayes intention. I haue read of many craftie plots, as of * Simseon and Leui, that set vpon the Sichemites, whilst they were sore of their circumcising, of x Adramalech, and Sharezer that slew Senacherib when he was worshipping in the Temple of Nisroch, of y Chafis Ilbeg, who flying vnto Hadrianople, like a discontented fugitiue and hauing gotten some authority in the Citie, on the suddaine set vpon the warders at the gates, and having slaine them, let in his ambushment not farre off, and so betrayed it into the hands of the Turkes, of z Terhates Bassa, who feyning himselfe to be at the point of death, sent for Alas-Beg, and his foure sonnes, with pretence, that if he should die, he would commend his gouernement into his hands, till Solyman his Master should otherwise dispose of it, and so with this wily devise, hauing drawne them to him presently put them all to death, of a those desperate wretches in the dayes of Iustinian, that went with sharpe weapons secretly vnder their garments, and stabbed men to death, no men knew which way. But of all subtile deuises, this carries the superiority. For consider the passages in it: To the Priest it is disclosed vnder seale of confession, so that he must not reueale it. Next, the Actors had sworne, that neither directly, nor indirectly, by word, nor circumstance they would discouer it, so that they had made sure worke at home, Confessors, and complices are bound to secrecy, like Angeron the goddesse of silence, that the Poets speake of, which holdes her finger vpon her lippes, with a tablet vpon her breast, and this inscription vpon it, Heare, see, and say nothing, Papirius was not more ready to cut his tongue out of his mouth, because he should haue beene forced to confesse

* Gen. 34.

x 2. Kings 19.
y Knolles.

z Knolles.

a The watch-
word being Nina, in which were thirty thousand slain
at Constantinople.
Procop. et Enagr.

confesse his treason, then these would haue beene ready to haue beene discerpted, euiscerated, to haue had limbe torne from limbe, rather then they would haue had any thing brought to light. Consider further.

First, the place wher they wrought, vnder the ground. They are not for a roome, where the light of the sun (that bright and broad eye of the World) could haue discerned them neither where men with their two sparkling planets in their heads, could ordinarily view them; no, they lurk in their thensh corners, they are for a caue, a dūgeon, a vault, a close celler: who could there haue spied out any thing, but he that needed neither eye to search, or to haue window to be opened, or vault doore to be vnlocked, to whom darkenes and light were both alike? but for men they were sure enough.

The time when they wrought, in the night; Night is that which wicked men take vp for a mist to their actions, a mantle to their wretchednesse. <sup>b</sup> Faults haue then gotten their couerts, and men may sinne by a kind of priuiledge. This was the opportunitie they tooke, when honest men were at their rest, then they were watching, and sweating, to conuey in their engines of horror.

The materials whereupon they wrought, which were chiefly gun-powder. Against an earth-quake (saith Petrarch) there is no hiding, nor shifting; so say I for Gun-powder. The blast is inevitable, for all them within the compasse, it is a quicke dispatcher; In a plague, a man may escape, in a battell a man may come forth aliue, against poisons, a man may haue Antidotes, but from Gun-powder what muniment, or preteruatiue? no, it is the strongest arrow in deaths quiver.

The colour they set vpon the worke, it was to lay in winter provision. Were not these men (thinke you) much to bee commended that could prouide so well against a hard Winter? and was not that Master thinke you very happy that had such a faithfull seruant as Faux, to lay vp in store for him? but the Master should neuer haue made vse of this prouision for himselfe, neuer haue warmed himselfe

E

with

1

2 *b Nocte latens

menda vitioq;
ignoscitur om-
ni. Ouid.*

3

*c Contra terramotum nulla
latebra, nulla
fuga. Petr. 91.
Dial.*

4

with the billet, nor haue had so much as a draught out of the 36. barreles, the Matter herein me thinkes was a strange kind of prodigall; oh but it was for friends, it was for a Parliamentary breakfast, and Papists care not to bestow much vpon such a courtesie for vs; there were Lawes to be made, and they would haue them to be proclaimed, Cum jonitu, with noife: indeed it had beene the lowdest trumpet that euer the earth heard, or shall heare, except the trumpet vpon mount Sinab, and the last trumpe; Heere are Popish proclamations of Lawes,<sup>d</sup> they would fill all the sky with a lamentable roaring.

*d Mugitula-
mentabils, om-
nia complerent
Greg. Naz. in Mon.*

Well, the devise was so great, that they began to send forth their Prophecies to their friends, That the memory of novelties should perish with a cracke, and in a moment should their bones be crushed; yea, they thought a man might have scene any thing in the Aegyptian darknesse, as soone as have had any thing in this enterprise discovered; in so much that when it was revealed, Faux (that Cerberi Faux, if it may belawfull to vse the word, that jawe of Cerberus) vttered this blasphemous censure, that not God but the Devill had dicovered it. Now lay all these things together, and consider with your selves whether mans eare ever heard, or mans heart can conceive a more secret plot; no, our Adversaries were close enough, like Basilisks, they would have kill'd before they had beene scene. Our Adversaries said, they shall neither know, nor see.

Till we come into the midst of them.

Next, Till we come into the midst of them. And were not our Adversaries aymes as haughty? were they not for the Midst? the height of authority? the heart of command? Yes, Rome would be felt in her stroke. They care not for some eminent man, or some chiefe familie, but for the Nation; a Nationall Stratagem, our Kingdome must haue perished from her highest toppe. Twelve men were about to bring into bondage, a whole Kingdome with one stroke, yea, with one blow to make a generall thrall; the Papists strike

e Ruit alto à culmine Troia.

The Churches Hazard.

Strike home. They would put out all the lights of the Land at a blast, what a darke house had there beene? Rome hath a strange kind of extinguisher. They would batter downe all the bulwarkes of the Kingdome at one Cannon-shot: Mahomet the Great, Solyman the Magnificent, nor any of the mighty martiall spirits in the World, euer had such artillery. The King in his Throne should haue bene blowne vp, the Queene his consort in wedlocke, should haue beene his consort in woe, the Prince at their knees, should haue beene heyre apparant to nothing but their misery, not a Noble-man should haue beene left, not a Prelate to gouerne the Church, not a Iudge to defend the Lawes, and many an hundred of Knights, and Burgessees, should haue bene fetcht away with the impetuous gust of that whirle-wind. How neere soeuer the Papists might haue beene vnto vs at other times, I thinke these had beene in our bosomes, In the Midst. Our Aduersaries sayd, they shall neither know nor see, till we come into the midst of them.

And slay them.

Next, And slay them. And what but Slaughter can be expected from Rome, when the bloody bourreaues of the World, haue there their settled mansions? For there to kill men, to destroy states, <sup>f</sup>it is a skill, an art, a custome. A- milcar sayd, he bred vp his foure tonnes, like Lyons whelpes, to the destruction of the Romane Empire: So these like the wilde beastes breed, are bred vp to teare in pieces the bowels of Christian states. <sup>h</sup>Hell rule ouer you, was it sayd in the dayes of Nero. So hell is not greedier to deuoure soules, then Rome bodies, Common-wealthes. Caligula, after a slaughter, licked off the blood of the edge of his sword, as if it had beene a Cordiall, and indeed to Caligula it might be; So these murder, and delight in murdering. The Church of Rome was wont to be built vp by preaching, and disputations, yea, Martyrdome, but now to exalt their Hierarchy, they haue found out a more ready, and feate course, by poysons, pistols, ponyards, massacres; Romes conuersors, f Peritia est, ars est, usus est. Cyp. ep 2.

g Tanquam Leoninos catulos in perniciem Romani Imperii. Plut.

h Orcus volens ducit pedes. Sueton.

the Iesuits lively doctrine, or deadly; their operative sermons, or rather occifory; they are waxen peremptory indeed, (ye know the signification of the word, or if ye doe not, there needes no Comment to explaine it, but their practise) they fetch blood at pleasure, by their new kind of preaching, they are the onely Pulpit-men in the World, that strike to the heart; they can equivocate a State to death, a lethall deuise. Well, whether this worke had bin a pastime, yea or no, judge yee; Gunpowder makes mad pastime, a pastime it might haue beene to them, but a perishing it had beene to vs. What one liuing soule had there remained of that Honourable Assembly gathered together? it had beene the great Funerall of the meeting; in a day, in an houre, a minute, neuer so many Worthies of our Land (since the Land had a name) had breathed out together their last gaspe. And for the miseries intended to the Land in generall, the heart may tremble, and the cheekes looke pale at the thought of them, they are incredible, they had beene vn sufferable; Mee thinkes I see how this whole Land had beene turned into a Charnel-house, where there should haue bene nothing but dead mens corpses, and bones to bee found; a shambles in euery Citty, a slaughter-house in euery Country, that as Asia was called once the Grave of Rome, for their many Nobles that had beene there slaine, and buried in the time of those warres, so England had bin but the Churchyard of the Protestants, yea, and that which any sober Papist that is not drunken with the Iesuits giddy wine, may tremble at, they had bin mercilesse to men of their owne profession; <sup>i</sup> The Dragons will draw out their breasts to their young ones; but these cared not for the crushing of them. For it was the gracious resolution of Father Garnet (who was their provincially then in England) that it was no sinne to destroy the innocent with the nocent, the deuill himselfe neuer vttered such a doctrine, hee would not destroy them of his owne Kingdome; Belzebub therefore may loose his place, and Garnet become hells superintendent. The simple Lay-Papists from hence may see how

--animus meminisse horret.

i Lam. 4.

how the Iesuits vphold a Religion onely to suck meanes out of their coffers, for as for their liues they care not; no, as it was said of Caligula that he flew <sup>k</sup> Senatours, and his owne kinsmen, so they which were of the blood of their owne profession had smarted with the rest. Yea had they by this plot brought in some forraine power here to rule, I wonder what respect English Papists should haue found at their hands; As it was in vaine for Galba to cry out <sup>1</sup> what ayle yee oh my Fellow-Soldiers? I am yours, and yee are mine; So in vaine had it beene for them to say, what meane yee our Fellow-professours? wee are limmes of the Church of Rome, and so are yee; no they would haue put no distinction betwixt one and other, as <sup>m</sup> Duke D'Alua said once, his sword knew no difference betwixt the throat of a Papist, and a Protestant. A slaughter indeed not to bee paraleld; I read of many, of Herod that flew his owne sonne, of Dioclesian that killed Aper his father in law, of Selymus that wretch that flew his owne Father; of Periander that kild his wife, of Bessus that slue his owne Master Darius, of Pyrrhus, that flew his trusty seruant and Secretary. But here, Father, sonne, husband, wife, master, seruant, secretary, the state had gone to it; Romes-slaughter, a State-slaughter; yea and not onely vs whom they counted Heretickes, but the Darlings of their owne bosome brought to perdition; So that of their slaying wee need not doubt. No, Our Adversaries said, they shall neither know nor see till wee come into the midst of them, and slay them.

<sup>k</sup> Senatores et cognatos. Suet.

<sup>1</sup> Quid agitis commilitones? ego vester sum, & vos mei. Sueton.

<sup>m</sup> Hist. of the Neth.

And cause the worke to cease.

Next, And cause the worke to cease. And had not this gone with it? had not Religion beene driven into banishment? had not our golden Candlesticke beene throwne downe? had not our pillar of truth beene raised? had not the wide dore of the Gospell amongst vs beene lockt vp? had not the songs of the Temple ceased? yes, your feete must haue trode no more vpon the pavements of these Sanctuaries, nor your eares heard any longer the sweet charmes of salvation, this worke ha : cealed ; And a goodly worke no doubt had come in the stead ; wee should haue had Masses againe, the Masses of ignorance and indevotion, for what manner of supplications are those that are in an vnknowne tongue ? the Priest may conjure then if he will,

 for if he doe but conclude Per Iesum Christum Dominum no- strum, he shall haue the peoples Amen ; Masses, therefore mockeries, Masses, Maskings, yea fitter for a Miske then for Church service : And wee should haue had Tradition, the third Testament of Christ Iesus, the Lip-oracle that God would neuer suffer to come to writing, an inspiration forsooth, and yet not to haue an inspection ; And we should haue had the Breden-God, Transubstantiation, translation; for Christ deliuered Bread and Wine, and now it is translated into a God : Romes translated Sacrament, a God they haue made it, though God know but a breaden God : For strange it is, that Christ Iesus would leaue his supernall mansion now to dwell in boxes, and pixes, and wafer-cakes ; and that hee which hath incorruptible glory would now come, and roost vnder elements, that are apt to soist, and mould, and bee poisoned, and eaten of vermine ; a Brea-den god indeed, that suffer such deperitions ; And wee should haue had Inuocation of Saints ; Inuocation of Saints ? what is it but indignity to Saints ? For doe the Saints in heauen thinke God so mercilesse now, that hee must be mediated to by them to shew mercy ? doe these men thinke Christ not a sufficient Mediatour, for why else doe they fly to others ? or doe they thinke these as sufficient as Christ, for else how dare they call vpon them ? How shall they call vpon them in whom they haue not beleued ? besides it would doe a man good to thinke of their Inuocation of Saints, when Longesse that thrust the speare into the sides of Christ, and Sr. Chappelet a notorious vsurer and cheater, and many others that were monsters both in life and death, are put into the number of Saints. Besides we should haue had Holy water, faire water I should haue said ; for why Holy water ? because it can driue away Devils ? strange it is, that

that those Devils, that can scarce bee driven away by all kind of watchfulnesse, prayers, teares, vowes, that they should bee driven away with the sprinkling of a few drops of Holy Water; Rome hath an excellent fountaine: what should I speake of their Indulgences, Purgatory, Crucifixes, and the like? yet this was the Dagon they fought for, to aduance superstition againe, to bring in their Worke, and to cause our Worke to cease. Our Aduerjaries said, they shall neither know nor see till wee come into the mist of them, and slay them, and cause the Worke to cease.

Thus beloued at last haue I shewne you the swart face of this detestable treason, the Monster of all cunning inuentions, and cruell conspiracies: yea<sup>n</sup> what mouth of hell<sup>n</sup> Quæ inferna euer vomited out such a mischiefe? What now remaines? tantum scelus but that wee should first. vomerunt, Amb.

Commemorate: And our best commemoration is to make application to God; to acknowledge, admire, magnifie this worke. For whom should wee magnifie if not God? And for what should wee magnifie God if not for this? First whom should wee magnifie if not God? This great deliuerance was<sup>o</sup> in the knees of God, as the Poets phrase is: ο ταῦτα δεινὰ In the knees of God, and not in the braines of men; ο γένεσι κείται. Homer.
Odys.
I. Eurymachus
ad Telemachum.
For it was neither our fore-sight, nor force that could haue deliuered vs;
1. not our fore-sight, for all the state-policy in the world could not haue helped vs. 2. Not our force, for all our bands of armed souldiers could not haue rescued vs,<sup>p</sup> as that King prudently and piously confessed; if the Lord had not put into the heart of that noble Lord Mount-eagle to communicate the Letter, and into the heart of the King to interpret the abstruse intricate meaning of the Letter, contrary to all Grammaticall sense, it had beene impossible for vs to haue beene delivered; therefore 9 All men shall see, and say, this is the Lords doing, for they shall perceiue that it is 9 Psal. 64. 9. his worke; therefore Non nobis Domine, non nobis, Not vnto vs (oh Lord) not vnto vs; not vnto our wisdom, or valour;
Sed nomini tuo, Vnto thy name, thy might and mercy let all the

I.

I,

p K James in his speech to the Parliament.

the praise be given. And praise let it be.

2 For, for what wil we magnifie God it not for this? *Who-r Quisquis non soever doth not see this to be Gods work, is blind, whosoever seeth videt cecus est, it, and doth not magnifie him for it, is unthankfull. Oh that quisquis videt there should be faint ecchoes of our praises in Gods Courts Et non laudat- as this day, that the roofes of Gods Temples should not ingratus est. shake with our gratulatory sounds; Oh bring forth the Aug lib. 1. de Lute, and the Harpe, the well-tuned Cymballs, and the civit Dei c. 1. loude-sounding Cymballs, praise God in the highest for this highest favour, which is the most matchlesse tempo-rall-deliverance, that ever the finger of God wrought vpon earth: the people of Rome had so good hopes of Caligula at the first, that that day wherein he began his Reigne (by decree of Senate) was called The Day wherein Rome was new built: So we may call this day as the day wherein England was new borne. And shall wee not honour our Birth-day? that day wherein God hath granted breath, and life to state, and Church? yes, consider the streames of that River, that still make glad the Citie of the Lord amongst vs; and honour the Fountaine from whence they flow, for, for what will we magnifie God it not for this blessing?*

2 To detest the Church of Rome; for how damnable is that Religion, that hath becne the fosterer and producer of such a devillish designe? Oh let vs abhorre that Church where Murderers and Traytors are tolerated, yea Canonized: these are <sup>t</sup> fruits not of figge-trees, but of brambles; Oh that ever Treason should be so deeply rooted in the Popes heart, that hee should not bee ashamed in the sight of the whole world, to mingle the blood of Garnet with the blood of Christ. Oh Holy Father! Oh pure Religion! Well, let these practises execrable, horrid, make vs tremble at their religion, and with constancie cleave to our owne religion; Yea, seeing God so miraculously, as this day defended our caus, let vs neither be doubtfull to embrace this faith, nor bashfull to professe it.

*t Flores non planè fructuum
sed spinarum.
Aug.*

3 To live like a hallowed and consecrated people vnto God; for, oh that God should be dishonored here, where he hath

hath opened his bosome, spread out his wings, revealed his arme ! that his mercies should be fresh before our eyes, and our sinnes stinke vpon earth, cry to heaven ! Oh sacrifice your sinnes before God, that this day did not deliver you over as a sacrifice to the rage of your Adversaries ; vowe your selves to his service, that kept you from them that had vowed your slaughter ; let not your deuotions cease, seeing the worke does not cease ; seeke Gods face, that hee may ever seeke your blisse, keepe you from outward invasion, inward conspiracy ; protect your bodies, preserve your soules, deliver you from the malice of men, and the fury of Devils, give you the happinesse of a Church visible vpon earth, and the glory of a Church triumphant in heaven. Which that he may do, God graunt for his mercies sake.

Amen.

---

F

NABALS

Arraignement :

OR

A CHRISTMASSE-
CHVRLE.

Delivered in a Sermon in the Cathedrall Church of NORVVICH, the 9. of Ianuary, 1630.

By THO. REEVE, Minister of Gods Word at COLEBY in NORFOLKE.

L O N D O N,
Printed by AVGVSTINE MATHEVVE S,
for IOHN GRISMOND, and are to be
sold by EDVVARD MARTIN of Norwich.

1 6 3 2.

TO ALL THE ANCI-ENT NOBILITY, AND GEN-TRY OF THE KINGDOME, THE honour of Charity here, and the hap-pinesse of Charity hereafter.

Right Honourable, Right Worshipfull,

MY motion is for Charity, for that which is the lustre of profession, the ornament of high birth; for this have your Fore-fathers left vnto you their armes, and their possessions: this is that which will send honour into their Tombes, and make their heres (as it were) cast forth yet a kind of fragrancy; charity legitimates you in your pedigrees, and causes the world to acknowledge that ye like true heires enjoy their means, not having cut off the entayle; by this the hearts of friends approve of you, and the mouthes of Adversaries are stopt. Shall Papists have the preheminance of vs in any vertue, or especially get the fore hand of vs in Charity? no, declare that pure obedience can draw as free bounty from you, as the Allective of Merit did from them; our Religion as it hath blowne vp the dying coales vpon the Altar, so it hath not put out the fire in your Kitchens; though the Rood-loft be downe, that there need no prayers to Saints, yet Charities box was never pluckt vp, that ye should neglect the prayers of the poore ; wee have not beene so mindfull of Divinity, that we have thrust by humanity ; or beene so earnest to restore the primitive piety, that wee have forgotten the ancient pittie ; no, we have made faith speake, that before was tongue-tyed with ignorance, and commanded her to worke, lest the world should thinke wee have removed an Idiot, and brought in a fluggard ; wee looke that the bread of life may bee broken in our Temples, and the bread of compassion in our Halls, wee would have a famine of neither ; whatsoever was bad in Popery, we have swept it into the sinke, whatsoever was good, wee desire to retaine it with greater honour in the family ; wee wish the old Basket of Hospitality were made wider, and that the Foundations of Almes-houses were layde a pearch longer, and a yeare sooner ; we loath, rebuke, condemne Covetousnesse, if wee cannot reforme it, yet our disciplining blowes are seene vpon the back of it.

THE EPISTLE

Oh then ye Honourable, and Noble Personages, poore mens Wonders, and the Lands Beauties, be as enclined to Charity, as ye are enabled to it ; it is the Crest of your Religion, it is engraven into your Armes ; Looke daily vpon that which your Fathers bestowed vpon pious vses, as vpon their pictures or linages ; be enamoured on their vertues, be ambitious of their praises. Carry your selves favourably to your Tenants, or else Nicippus Ewe shall seeme to have brought forth a Lyon, and be constant Fosterers of the poore, lest ye blot out the very memories of your famous Progenitours. Looke vp to that heaven where

DEDICATORIE.

where they now shine, and behold the staves of that Ladder by which they ascended ; Make a solemn search for their old Accounts , and let your proportion of Charity not be inferiour to their yearely expences, that ye finde there they bestowed vpon the poore ; they purchased your lands for you, built for you those magnificent structures, spent much in those dayes in warres, and yet scanted not their workes of mercy ; ye then which have all these things provided for you, and are eased of many of these cares and charges, and perhaps have new honours conferred vpon you, why should not ye equal them in bounty ? Oh therefore whether ye attend at Court, or reside in the Country with vertuous Iob, Eate not your morsels alone. Iob 31.

And ye the auncient Gentry of our Kingdome, whom your Fathers have made generous, degenerate not from them ; why carry ye their bloud in your veines, or put their honours into your birth-rights, if ye will not imitate them ? The Country rang, and the Kingdome ecchoed with their Bounty, and why should not ye their successours labour to be magnified with them ? It is the Monster of speech and practise to heare, or see, that House-keeping should bee out of fashion ; No , this is to have faith and fame out of fashion, and to have nothing put into fashion, but basenesse, and penuriousnesse ; Keepe your standing Houses therefore in the Countrey, and be not Dor-mice in Cities ; are not those auncient Families straightned ? then neither let the olde Hospitality be ; Your Fore-fathers were not so lauish to erect those large buildings onely for Passengers

THE EPISTLE

gers to gaze on, nor of such abject spirits to raise vp such magnificent edifices for Farmers to roost in;
No, they were reared vp for you to have Receptacles of honour in your Countries, and to bee fitted with Mansions for Charity, if ye would not starve Charity for maintenance. To come therefore to those houses onely to receive Rents, or to feast with your Neighbour Gallants, were to give the shoulder to Charity, and to put the scorne vpon all your Progenitours worthy purposes. By all the reverence therfore that ye beare to your Auncestours memories, by all the comfort that ye take in their veruious actions, yea, by the renowne that ye desire to profession, and by the rewards that ye hope for in heaven, carry I beseech you an exact resemblance of them in their Almes-deedes, lest ye hold along with them in a long line of descent, till the day of judgement, but then come to part at the Throne. Thus wishing that Charity once againe may lift vp her old bright brow in the Nation, I rest as

The faithfull, and vnfayned admirer and obseruer of all true Nobility, and Gentry.

THO: REEVE.

N A B A L S

ARRAIGNEMENT:

<sup>OR,</sup>
A CHRISTMASSE-
CHVRLE.

I. SAM. 25.10.

Shall I then take my bread, and my water, and my flesh that I haue killed for my shearers, and giue it vnto men whom I know not whence they be.

Ho can touch Nabal, but hee must looke for a sowre brow? Earth- Wormes cannot endure to heare their owne names; to reprehend covetousnesse then it is dangerous, yet necessary; for when the poore are ready to famish, and that in peace, as in a siege, it is time for the Minister to call for mercy. I grieve ouer all sinners, but I detest the gripple Worldling, that sams Demill with the Iron head, as the Mores of Fiske called Turquet.
G. the

the Marques of Ulez; who when treasures had need to be cast into the open streets, keeps them with warders within the compasse of his owne thre shold; who when the long Table of our renowned forefathers had need to be set vp in euery hall, keeps his feastes at the round boord with himselfe and his company; hee knowes for whom hee makes ready his prouision; for them whom he knowes to haue a relation to him, not for them whom he knowes not whence they are; like Nabal here, Shall I then take my Bread, and my Water, and my Flesh, and giue it vnto men whom I know not, Whence they are?

*Vermes luto obvoluit. Chry.
hom. 22. de
vanit. et brev.
vita.*

Amongst Dauids sorrowes, Nabals vnkindnesse is inserted for one; and it is no small misery in misery to meete with Churles, who are nothing but Wormes covered ouer with dirt. Nabal was one of them, and that as wee vse to say, Prima impressio, of the deepest stampe; for how courteously is he here saluted by Dauid? Aske him in my name how he doeth, verse 5, what welfare is wished vnto him? Peace be vnto thee, and peace be to thy house, and peace bee to all that thou hast, verse 6. How is hee vrged with the Law of gratitude? Thy shepheards were with vs, We hurted them not, neither was there ought missing vnto them, all the while they were in Carmell, verse 7. How is he pressed but with a reasonable demand? Giue I pray thee any thing that comes to thy hand, to thy seruants, and to thy sonne Dauid. Yet what doth all this worke from Nabal? bountifull reliefe no doubt, see it, verse 10. Quis est Dauid? quis filius Ishai? Who is this Dauid? Who is this sonne of Ishai? hee turnes him off with a Quis; yea, and marke further, There be many seruants now a dayes, that breake away euery man from his Master. Nabal is a liberall man, but it is of his speech, and that as good as can droppe from the lippes of Nabal. Well in conclusion, what will he doe? give a hundred reasons, rather then two mites; he hath bread, water and flesh, but not to part withall for fine wordes; they are his shearers that he lookes vpon with a broad eye, he knowes not Dauid, and such company. Shall I then take my bread, water and flesh, &c.

Shall

Shall?

Nabal will expostulate vpon the businesse; though not exhibit, yet expostulate; though not part with a crumme, yet speake with the mouth of distrust and disdaine. Shall? Next, Shall I. Though other men may be brought to condescend to such things, yet thinke ye to haue meat command? Greatnesse must be taken notice of, and priuiledged euen for the golden trappings; misery is too bold there to aske any thing, Shall I? Again (saith Nabal) that which thou expectest is a great matter, Bread, Water, and Flesh. Nabal summes vp the gift to the height; though but Bread, Water, and a little Flesh, yet it seemes a matter of moment to bee spent in charity. Besides (saith Nabal) I haue a lawfull excuse to detaine it, I haue killed it for my shearers. Covetousnesse neuer wants her subtile pretences. Further (saith Nabal) yee are such persons, as I know not whence ye are. Not know whence they are, and yet had done so many courtesies for him lately in Carmel? Oh see how Nabals ingratitude can dry vp an Ocean of fauours in a bubble, and cast vp the totall summe of a million of good turnes into a cipher; he hath spunged out the memory of all Dauids kindnesse, and though not long since hee had ventured limbe, and life for his welfare, yet vpon vrging of requitall, hee is ready to call him to his face, impudent. Expressely thus, David is now in distresse, and so may hee bee for all Nabal, he knowes him not; Persons in misery are ever strangers, necessity hath but small acquaintance in the World; whomsoever Nabal knew exactly, yet these distressed men he knows not whence they are, Shall? then, &c. Let vs come to the division of the words.

1. Shall, with a bitternesse.
2. I, with an haughtinesse.
3. Bread, Water and Flesh, with a poyfing.
4. Which I haue killed for my shearers, with an evasion,
5. And giue it vnto men whom I know not whence they bee, with a cleanly discarding.

Shall?

Doct.

Ephes. 4. 32.

James 3. 17.

Gal. 5. 14.

συ τῷ πνεύματι
διμασσε.

Ira per zelum.

Charles 5. in admon. to Phil. 2.

Use.

Totus Eschimus

affer. Adag.

Prou. 12. 18.

Vt vinum

austerum non

est aptum

potioni, sic

improbes agrestes

etc.

Prou. 15. 24.

First, Shall, with a bitternesse. From whence obserue that the tart veine belongs to the Worldling, Religion teacheth vs no such amarulency; no, Be ye courteous one to another. The wisdom that descendeth from above is gentle. They which are Christs, haue crucified the flesh with the passions thereof. Passions I know in themselves are not euill, so they bee ordered by reason; Ira, Wrath is put amongst the affections, and as lawfull as joy, or love, or teare, or hope, or any of the rest. There is a zealous wrath, when a man is incensed for things noxious, & apparent, and this is laudable; but when men make indignation an humour, and asperitie, is euen as common as speech it selfe, this is to be a Slave to passions: What more seemely in man, then humanity? let a man deprive himselfe of that, and what is hee then but a wilde beast? the froward affections belong to the wicked, as to Nabal here, Shall. This serues to reprove the rough language, or rather the dog-equence of the times. For many there are, that speake in no other phrased then snarling; propound a question, the answer is rage; they are like the beast that is on all sides prickles. There is that speaketh words like the pricking of a sword: they fight not at foyles, but at sharpe. But oh, learne more moderation of speech, for as Socrates was wont to say, As sharpe wine is not fit for taste, so harsh manners are not fit for conuersation. Morosity is one of the greatest enemies to all the homiliticall vertues. Faire wordes are as an hony-combe, sweetnesse to the soule, health to the bones. Away therefore with all sowre, peeuish, Saturnine dispositions; if thou beest earnest, bee deeply, and justly incensed, not vpon euery occasion tetricall; for that were like Nabal here, who is no sooner spoken to, but hee casteth balles of wild-fire. Shall saith Nabal?

Shall?

Doct.

Shall? From hence further obserue that Checkes are worldlings almes. They not onely not satisfie the demand but but giue the deniall with a kind of vnkindnesse. The tongue of a tickle man being touched with choler, or some other sharpe humour can tast nothing sweet, but all things seeme bitter; So to a heart touched with couetousnesse no request seemes pleasing, but all offensive; such are vpon termes of defiance vpon eucry charitable motion; the whispering of an almes is vnto them as the challenging of the field. They pursue them with words, yet are they wanting to them. Let not persons in necessity aske any thing there, for if they doe, Nabals winter-face is soone discerned, and a nest of scritch-owles seeme to come out of the lippen. The poore speaketh with prayers, and the rich answereth roughly. They braue vpon men in their misery, they turne the key vpon them with a contumely, and banish them away with a chafe. Shall saith Nabal?

Lingua infirma qua infecta est cholerico & amaro humore non potest percipere aliquid dulcē, &c.
Tho Aq 1.4. 75. art. 2.
Pro. 19.7.

Pro. 18.23.

This serues to send home the scornes of worldlings to their owne thresholds with ignominy; for can they hold their hands, and not their tongues? must they needs bee putting the varlet vpon men in misery? and bee telling of them a tale of statute-lace? Speeches more bitter, then their misery it selfe to bee indured; no, away with all reproachfull, taunting language. If thou hast nothing to giue a poore man giue him thy teares, but if thou canst giue much and wilt giue nothing yet giue him not surly vsage. No, Reprooffe in the time of aduersity is no other then cruelty. Provoke not a man in his distresse, adde not more trouble to a heart that is afflicted, Turne not away thine eye from the needy, giue him no occasion to curse thee, Let it not griene thee to bow downe thine eare to the poore, and giue him a friendly answer with meekenesse Hee is harsh indeed, which in stead of releeuing the wants of his brethren sends a storme after them; like Nabal heere, Giue I pray thee any thing that comes to thy hand saith David, Shall saith Nabal?

Si nihil habes Colla. hryma. Greg. Naz. Crudelis in re aduersa est oburgatio Pub. Ecclus. 4.2.3. 5.8.

I?

Next, I? with an haughtinesse. From hence obserue that worldlings by their riches plead nothing but priuiledge;

Doct.

Mat. 23. 4.

Pro 18. 11.

viledge ; that whereas being most able, they should be most willing to doe good, they turne off this to their inferiours ; as if they would be as ill Common-wealths-men, as some are Pulpit-men, laying heavy burthens upon other mens shoulders, but not touching them with one of their fingers themselves. The rich mans goods are his strong confidence, and as an high wall in in his owne imagination, euen to fence him from all sort of payments. Worldlings thinke themselves of too Noble a breeding to beare burthens, no, preserve them for foote-cloth horses to pace the streets in pompe, but lay no chargeable loades on their backs ; no, that's but servile worke, and they would haue it left to the sumpter-horses of the times. Nabal here perhaps would haue beene contented, that other men might haue releued Dauid, yea, had he sent to him for his judgement in the point, he would haue held it expedient, but Nabal cannot endure that the man in his owne skinne should be touched. Shall I, saith Nabal ?

Use.

Neh. 5. 14. 17.
18.

Vena porta.

*Si stomachus
infirmus erit
omnia membra inueniuntur
infirmas, C. 17.
in Mat. hom.
38.
Plut.*

This serues to exhort rich men to make themselves Superiours to others, chiefly in good workes ; Greatnes is then most conspicuous, when it holdes the fore-ranke in vertue renowned for ever be Nehemiah, who when he would induce others to Charity, He himselfe tooke not of the people the bread of the Gouvernour ; Hee himselfe would not that yeere lay out his estate in purchasing, but maintained at his table an hundred and fifty of the Iewes. If the great wheelles of the Countrey doe not stirre in Charity ; how shall the lesser moue, if the prime veine of the body be stopt ; what good blood can there be in the lesser veines ? if the chiefe light of the firmament bee eclipsed in workes of mercy, what a darke sky will there bee besides ? If the stomacke waxe feeble all the other members languish. Tenacity in great men is like the hearbe Sea-holme in the mouth of the Leader of the goats that puts all the flocke to a stand. Yet how commonly is it seene that many rich men for charges desire to be let loose like the Scap-goat in the Law, the Commons are brought forth only as the beasts for sacrifice. They are not Rich men for expences, but only for the right hand or the vpper

upper seat; if yee will they will bee Oracles of wit to perswade others, or scourges of iron to enforce others, yee shall haue their letters or their warrants to constraine or distreine, but if yee pry too farre into their estates, how farre they must bee rated yee will bee blasted. Must they?

Shall I?

Doct. 25

Shall I? From hence further obserue that Greatnesse would bee eyed. Pride is oftentimes the Comrade of wealth, if men grow wealthy their eyes start out with fatnesse. There is nothing then, but intimating of their state, and pedigree. Knowest thou not mee? said Marcion vnto Polycarpe; The man would faine bee knowne to bee some body, though the good old Father told him that hee knew him indeed, but it was for nothing but to bee the first begotten of the Deuill. Many rich men loue to pride themselves in their greatnesse, and to be formidable to the world, to make the very mouing of their lips raise earth-quakes in the hearts of poore people. As the Lant-graue Fredericke daunted his enemies with the gingling of his spurre, so these endeavour to make their inferiours appalled with the very sound of their names; they speake nothing but Mannours; in euery syllable, gesture of the body, cast of the eye, they conuey a secret insinuation of their thousands. Shall I saith Nabal? hee need not mention his house at Maon, nor his pastures at Carmell, nor his sheepe, nor his goats, nor his attendants and retinue; for this I pronounced with a paire of Nabals lips is a sufficient Interpreter of all the rest.

Nil nisi Cocro-
pides. luv.
Neseisme?
scio se esse
primo geni-
tum Diaboli.
Euseb. eccl. histor. lib. 4. c. 14.

Manlio loc.
com. tit. de
calamit.

This serues to humble pride in her basenesse; for can there bee any thing more ignominious then to be proud of dust-heapes? to swell for scutcheons? no, bee thankfull to God for your estates, and not disdeignfull to your Inferiours. For should yee neuer bee well but when yee are carrying an Image of your owne greatnesse before you, as that diseased man did in Aristotle? or setting out your magnificence to the world as Apothecaries doe their gally-pots? should yee be your owne heraldes to blason your armes? or

Vse.

οἱ ἰσχυροὶ.
αἱ λαλοῦντες.

Tyrquet.

your owne Painters to draw out the pictures of your power? that yee may bee bright Sparkes, will yee turne all others into dead coales, cinders, ashes? that your impresses may seeme curious, will yee rase out the characters of all other mens worth? will yee looke as if yee were the onely men of merit? and speake as if yee would be held to be the sole worthies of the times? Oh hee had need of a cleere eye that should see sufficiently the mitchiefe of this practise. Superciliousnesse is euer rewarded with the contempt of the world. A proud man is his owne Idoll, and the worlds scorne. Mans nature can better endure any sinne in thee, then insolency. Paruspension, too meane an esteeme of a mans selfe hath bene held in Esbiikes a defect; but arrogancy hath euer bene held a grosse excessse. He may write all his true friends in the compasse of his nayle, that lookes vpon others as abjects, and holds the world at a distance. What two faire Kingdomes of Aragon, and Nauarre did Don Pedro de Atares his vnseasonable grauity loose him in scorning to speake with any man but when he pleased. pretending that he was busie about matters of state, when he had none but his Barber trimming him; they therfore that would hunt for command by pride, goe out with a mastiffe to chase it away. Oh therefore let all looke to bee knownen of God, and not care too much to bee knownen of the world; to bee ambitious of this, is but a Worldlings quality. Shall I saie Nabal? I with an haughtinesse.

Bread, Water and Flesh.

Verf. 36.

Ibid.

Next Bread Water and Flesh with a poysoning. Doth Nabal sticke so much at Bread, Water, and a little flesh? Hee made a feast in his house like the Feast of a King; surely then hee had more then bread, and flesh; and his heart was merry within him that he was drunke, surely then hee had more then water. Is Nabal so free at a Feast, and doth hee sticke so much at a few scantlings to bee bestowed vpon men in misery?

Dea.

Then from hence obserue, that any thing spent in charity with worldlings is a Burthen, seemes a great cost; though riot may deuoure pounds, yet almsdeeds must not haue a few pittances; the very fragments that fall from the table of surfet are held too much. An Epicure spends more in dressing of a fish, then would buy twenty poore men sufficient bread. Much is spent, but there is rather damage, then aduantage comes by it; there is rather a lauishng out of Gods blessings, then an orderly disposing of them. Many care not what they spend in excesse, but they weigh the very refuse bits they giue to the poore; profuse in one kind, penurious in another. Dimes fares deliciously euery day, but grudges at the very Crumm that fall from his table for Lazarus, yea his dogges shew more mercy then hee, in so much that a man would thinke the true hous-keepers were without, and the true Dogge within. Those Libertines in the 6. of Amos, Eat Calues out of the stalls, lye in beds of iuory, make them instruments of musicke like Dauid, drinke wine in bowles, anoynt themselves with the chiefe oyntments: But no man remembers the afflictions of Ioseph. Nabal here feasts like a Prince, but relieves the poore like a very Egeno. Bread, water, and flesh, then teeme much.

Peraldus Gulosus expendit in piscibus unde viginti pauperes satis haberent de pane.

Nullum compendium, sed dispendium.

Chrys. in orat. de mulie. & pulchri.

Potius dissipatio quam dispensatio.

Luke 16.

6. Amos 4. 5.

6.

This serves to reprove the vanity of these times, in which men are liberall in wast workes, parsimonious in charitable. They call them their Goods with which they doe no good, but use them to their owne evil purposes. There are many that will drinke whole Cellars dry over night, that will scarce bestow a cup of small liquor vpon the poore in the morning; many that will cast downe handfulls of gold for a Banquet, that notwithstanding repine to give a few small peeces of silver in charity; that will build gorgeously, burnish curiously, furnish sumptuously, that vpon pride and bravery for Spanish heads, and French bodies, for sweet powders, sweet waters, new complexions, care not what they bestow; yea, for suites, and quarrels, to lay a neighbour gasping at their feete, or to teare out the bowels of a Churchman, be it but for a shoo-latchet, or a title of the last Springs planting, care not how they cast away coyne; But when they come to a point of charity, then they pawle and def-cant, yea, cease to be great men, a man would thinke they were decayed, and turned Bankrupts. But oh beloved, if any should be sicke of this disease here, I beseech you let your vaine expences touch you, never let God seeme to charge you. Let superfluity be abated, never let charity be restrained; for that's but a Nabals part, who feasts like a Prince, but in charity sticks at a little Bread, water, and flesh:

Use.

Bona appellantur ex quibus nihil nisi ad malas res vultus est, Cyp. ep. 2. ad Donat.

shall I then take my Bread, water, and flesh?

Which I have killed for my Shearers.

Now let vs come to Which I have killed for my Shearers, with an evasion.

Doct.

*si porcinam
habuissas ani-
mam, quid ali-
ud dicere potuisse. Basil.
Digito facul-
tatum.*

1 Tim. 5, 8.

From hence observe, that the strength of the covetous mans excuse lies in his dependants; the state of the house must be upheld, the honour of the Family maintained, servants must be well provided for, and because these, therefore none else. If thou hadst the soule of a Swine what couldst thou resolve on more? These are kinde to all them within the compass of the coate. Servants I know are fingers to bring in our Wealth, therefore not to sustaine these, were to lame our selves in our estates; but to provide onely for these, is to thinke never to have neede of Gods Helpe, but onely of the helpe of the Family. I know the maine Article of their faith lay in, 1. Timoth. that If any man provide not for his owne household, he is worse then an Infidell; and therefore to shunne to be Infidels in one kinde, they care not to be as ill, as Asthefts in another kinde; their charity is made of the iust size of their family, they poyle out their provision according to the counter-weight of the household, even to Arithmeticall proportion; with alacrity there comes little else from them. I wonder why Porters in so many places are provided, are they in all places onely for due state? or to keepe out theeves? no, I reare in some places they are to keepe out the poore, that Nabal and his Shearers might be merry together.

Use.

This serves to exhort great men not to list their charity to them onely that weare the livery, and rise vp and call them Master. For art thou good onely to them of thy own household? I see no charity in this, for God ha' mercy gaine, or service, or state, for else even these Shearers might goe seeke their Bread, water, and flesh, as well as others. So often as I heare men to be of generous mindes to their companies, followers, and I heare no further, I count it rather a matter of mockage, then of praise; for it is not conscience but some sinister respects that draws them to this. Thou may'st be a niggard then for all thy domesticall bounty, nature wishest thee to respect these, policie wishest thee to tender these, & livest thou by no higher principles then of Nature, and policie? then thou art no deeper Scholler then one of Nabals forme, for he can spell charity heere to none, but his owne Shearers. Shall I then take my bread, water, and flesh, which I have killed for my Shearers?

And give it unto men whom I know not whence they be.

Lastly, And give it unto men whom I know not whence they be, with a cleanly discarding.

From hence observe, that the poore are thrust out of the Worldlings charge; they are strangers, and therefore what haue they to doe to take care of them? The friends of the Rich are many, but the poore is hated even of his owne neighbour: Many a poore man as well knowne at Turkey, as at the next Towne, perhaps at the next threshold. Ye may see what great acquaintance they take of them by that in the second of Iames, Depart in peace; the first word they speak to them, is, Farewell, are they not Strangers thinke ye, that can get no other greeting? are these willing to entertaine any friendship with the poore? no, as the Image of Minerva in Chios, looked frowningly on them that came towards it, smilingly on them that went away; so these Rich men have nothing but the frowne for them that come to them, the smooth brow they bestow on them that are ready to turne their backes; their estates are their fee-simple, and they wonder such Strangers will come to claime any thing out

Doct.

Pro. 14. 7.

2 Iames 16.

Erasm.

*Possident ad hoc tantum, ut
aliter possi-
dere non liceat.
pecuniam suam
dicunt quam
velut alienam
domi custodi-
unt. Cyp. ep. 2 Vagi potius ha-
bent terras
quam habitant
Bomp Mela.*

of them. They possesse their riches for no other end, but that others might get no possession out of them. They call it their money, and yet they keep it under locke and key at home; as if they had no power of it themselves, but were onely intrusted with it for others. As it is said of the *Blenny*es and Gambasanes, and other people in the Island Cyrenaick in the lesser Affrick, that They rather had land, then dwelt in it; so these rather have riches, then make any good vse of them. I thinke they are some Brownists; they like not the Lords prayer, Pater noster, Our Father; or howsoever not that petition of it, Give vs this day our daily bread, no they would appropriate all vnto themselves; their riches haue not beene distilled through the Limbecke of their owne paines and prouidence, now to bee sprinkled about in Charity; no, this they count the lavishing away of their costly water; call to them for an almes, and ye are forging a title against their demeanes; goe about to open their hands, and they are ready to cry felony; they stand ouer their riches, like harpyes ouer their preyes, not one to get a morsell out of them but themselves; they are providing for a yong strippling perhaps, and him they know, but as for this sordid crew, They know not whence they are.

7th

This serues to cast Nabal in his title, to bring in cleere euidence, that he is not the sole proprietary of his goods, for God hath reserved (as it were) a standing rent of every mans estate for the poore. Let thy fountaine flow forth, & thy riuers be in the midst of the streets, there must not bee then a private pond. Give a portion to seven, and likewise to eight. A man must not make himselfe the peculiar almes-man. These are precepts for charity, there are likewise precedents, as of Iob, that ate not his morsels alone, of Dorcas that provided coates and garments. And what needes more, is not Heaven called Abrahams bosom? that is the bosome of Abraham the Almes-giver. Liberalitie is one of the potenti- all parts of justice, as if so bee that those that were able, and were not charitable, were injurious. Rich men are not their owne men, no, they are all debtors, although not for a legall

*Pro. 6. 16.
Eccles. 11. 2.*

*Iob 31. 17.
Acts 9. 39.
Luke 16. 23.
Thom. Aquin.
Tho. Aquin.
22. 2. q. 117.
art. 5.*

legall, yet for a Morall debt. Hide not thy face from thy owne flesh, saith the Prophet; though not thy owne Gentry, yet thy owne flesh, taken out of the same slime-heape with thy selfe; thou maiest eate of delicater fare, weare costlier ray-ments, have one day a statelier tombe, prone a daintier morsell for wormes-meate, but set these things aside, they,
 and thou are cousin-germanes; seeing then there is so little difference betwixt rich flesh, and poore flesh, I pray take better acquaintance one of another, Know whence they are,
 and the rather, because riches (whereby many men challenge such high preheminance) are but transitory. Wilt thou set thy eyes vpon that which is not, riches may take them wings and flye away as the Eagle. How many possesse those lands that wealthy men were once owners of? I know not what better assurance yee have of your felicitie, then they had;
 I thinke yee hold your lands by the same tenure they did;
 Therefore vse your estates, as God hath appointed, for feare one judgement of God or other take vp your lands, as forfeitures; respect these strangers, for feare strangers come to plucke downe your armes, and to turne the keyes of your doores vpon you. Besides, why will yee not Know them whom Christ will assuredly Know? yea, not Know you, if ye take no notice of them; for remember I beseech you in the midst of your greatnesse, sublimitie, splendour vpon earth, the finall sentence, & heart-cleauing doome of worldlings, Depart from mee ye cursed into euerlasting fire, For I was an hungred, &c. Oh therefore though something for posterity, yet something for charity; though something for your owne sake, yet something for Gods sake, pittie the poore, cherish the poore, tender them as your owne limbes, honour them as Christs members; close not the eye, deafe not the eare, dead not the heart, turne not the backe vpon them; hold not them as strangers, with whom yee are not acquainted, vse them not as persons whom yee know not whence they are, for that were like Nabal here, Shall I then take my Bread, and my Water, and my Flesh that I haue killed for my shearers, and giue it unto men whom I know not whence they be?

Ec. 5.

Prou. 23. 5.

Matth. 25.

*— sic vultus, sic
ora ferebat.*

Hosea. 4. 2.
*— sunt filices
circum precor-
dis vena Communia
possidentes
propria faci-
unt occupando Basil. ser. 1. in divit. avaros.*

R
Luke 12.

Lucullus cum Lucullo. Plur.

Thus have I shewne vnto you the portraiture of Nabal; what fitter picture to be presented to the eyes of the worlde that if people detest his name, they might take heed of the reflexe of his manners. But when I see many count their goods seuerals, which take as much acquaintance of strangers as the needy, which bring out a dish of checkes to the poore, which giue nothing, or nothing but with the misers eye set vpon it, how doe I instantly thinke on Nabal? for thus hee looked, thus hee spake, these were his purposes, these his practises. Nabal is not so hard a patterne then, but many are contented to limme out their liues by him; which count his resolution the lustre of true wisdom, yea, a beame of plausible Divinity; oh the miseries of the poore? oh the mercilesnesse of the rich! an inhospitable age, costive times; the hand of bounty is cramped, the breastes of charity are dried vp, the complaint of the Prophet may euen bee taken vp. There is no mercy in the Land; there are veins of flint about mens heart strings. Men take possession of those goods that are common, and make them their owne by usurpation, much like them that proclaime themselves heyrest to the goods of Widdowes and Orphans. Not such a plentiful Nation vnder heauen, not such a penurious Nation vnder heauen. Our Kingdome was once an almes-house, and now it is turned into a Chuffes hutch as it were; wealth that was once a nource, now beates those children shee was wont to foster; it hath giuen over the stewards office, and is turned Treasurer; it hath left the house at the Pelican, and is come to dwell at the Dogge; it is good for nothing but to gorge it selfe like him in the Gospel. Thou hast much goods layd vp for many yeeres. What then, goe feast the hungry? goe perfume the streetes with the workes of mercy, no, Eate, drinke, and be merry; What the rich man onely with himselfe? will he invite onely his owne throat to his hauntings? hee is much at his cost, a Rich man sits downe, and a Churle rise vp, yet these are the guises, and fashions of the times. Nabal counts all intruders but his owne company at his board. Did our fore-fathers thus looke for honor? did they they thus eternize their names vpon earth? were the poore such eye-sores to them? tooke they so little acquaintance of them? no they sought them out, they brought them home, they fed them as cheerefully as their owne children, they gaue them as kind welcome, as if they had beene their solemne guests; they mewed not vp them selues in a narrow parlour, as if they had beene too neat pieces for a meane mans eye to behold, or a beggers lippes to breath vpon, but they came out to them, were familiar with them, filled their bowels with sustenance, their backes with raiment, their hands with rewards, and their hearts with gladnesse; they provided portions for their children, they built hospitalls for them. A Nabal was then as hatefull a creature to bee discerned, as a Crocodile, they would haue thought to haue beene in hell before Shroue-tide, if they had not feasted the poore at Christmas, and made them honour Christs birth, for the tastes of mercy they then found. Oh that compassion towards the poore might thus be streaming in her full tide, that charitie could be so generally scene with her basket by her side: I would then thinke part of the golden age were returned. But as the Turks vse to say in the midst of their solemne griefes, Mustapha is dead, Mustapha the flower of chiuariy. So we may say our old Benefactors are gone, our old Benefactors, the Fosterfathers of the distressed; good workes are now by many turned into good clothes, people care not to haue their tables furnished, but their Wardrobes, they thinke people are blessed enough, if they can see them in crimson; or almes-deedes are turned into purchases, they will loose their euidence in heauen, to become owners of other mens euidence; they will sell all the poore, to buy out another neighbour; one heire makes many shut vppe their handes to a whole Countrey; Yea, in these griping times, how many doe rather deuoure the poore then sustayne them? mercilesse wretches which haue the sweat of their browes, and the strength of their loynes euen at their owne price, which keepe away their Commons from them that were ditched in

Knolles in the life of Solyman
the Magnificent.

in with the Devils spade, which pare not their nayles, restraine not their sharking officers from tearing of skin and flesh from the backes of their poore Tenants by cruell fines, and amerciments; Thus yee see how charity is turned out at the backe doore; and pride, and insatiablenesse, and oppression come to domineere in the house. But oh if any here should be thus destitute of charity, or have none but that woluish charity in them, if they be not quite incorporated into Mammon, let bowels of compassion stirre in them; let them not loue that earth that is appointed to bee trampled on, nor set their hearts on that wealth that is not worth the least joynt of their bodies; let them not hate those poore whom Christ owues, nor grieue to giue them an almes to whom hee gaue his blood; let them shunne all sinnes, but especially abhorre to be vcharitable; Let them blisse God that they themselues are aduanced, and in the midst of their opulency and affluency let them remember the friends of their gracious Promoter; oh for miseries grones sake, for Christs Iesus precepts, patterne, blood sake let them not count their estates (though neuer so iustly gotten) pure, but troubled with a kind of infection without being censed by almesdeeds, for Giue almes and all things shall be cleane vnto you; oh let them not put their almes amongst their desperate debts, of which they haue seene in all likely-hood their last comfort; no, Cast thy Bread vpon the Waters, and after many yeares thou shalt find it againe; oh let them not hold their selues to haue carued well that meale to all their guests wherein the poore haue not receiued their portions, for Eat of the fat, and drinke of the sweet, and send some part to them, for whom none is provided. Let them know that the keeping of money is the rest of it, and the communicating of it is the motion of it; now money is not fetched out of the veines of the earth to lay in a corner, but to be communicated. The Moralists make honours, and riches adminicles vnto vertue; let them so bee vsed, and not as obstacles to hinder them from all goodnesse, to shew that they affect not the world, but haue renounced it, let them scatter abroad the trea-

Luke xi. 41.

Eccles ii. 1.

Nehem. 8. 10.

Tho. Aq.

treasures of the same: Oh communicate, oh distribute; consider your ability to doe good, consider the heavy necessities of the times; let your charity run in a free current amongst the distressed, and scuse not vp all your meanes within the channell of your owne family. For that were like Nabal here, Shall I then, &c.

Thus haue I spoken in generall for charity, giue me leaue to speake something vpon the same subject vnto you the worthy citizens of this renowned incorporation, to whom I am particularly called. Farre hence haue I heard your City commended for a place of ciuill gouernment, make it famous in all places, for a place of charitable gouernment; As ye are an incorporation, a body, so I beleeue you count not the poore, dead members. The times are already sharpe, but this is but the chilling of an ague, the strong fit is still behind; trading hath beene a long time dead, the prices of all graines are excessiue deere, alas poore soules, how shall they be able to wrestle long with these miseries? if yee do not speedily helpe to releue them, yee may ere long helpe to bury them. Your vigilancy I trust sleepes not, your charity I hope is in its due seruour; your praise is in the gates for your mercy abroad, we the children of a mother lately distressed blesse you that Alma mater Academia, our renowned Vniuersity, or howsoeuer the Towne her Hostesse drawes her breath the more comfortably for your beneficence; it was an offering indeed of a Faire eye, and the more acceptable becaute free; Well if the hearing of misery with the eare were the so forcible, let the seeing of it with the eye more preuaile, be most sensible of the paines in your owne bosomes; know that that gouernment is most praise worthy, by which sighes are remoued from the breasts of the poore. In publicke therefore let your chiefest communications, and consultations be for the poore; store their granaries, appoint solemae collections for them, heare their plaints with patience, visit their distressed corners, cast a Citie-livery vpon their backs, vse your best wits, and counse's

*Educ diuitias
compedebat
vnde. Basil.
Diuitem se
sentiant paupe-
res. Cyp.*

2. Ioh 3. 17.

Hof. 6. 6.

1. Iames 27.

*Nemo dicat,
habeo uxorem,
habeo liberos;
habeo lesu. m.
Chrysost.*

1 Tim. 6. 19.

to remedy their griefes, to preserue their liues ; your Citie may prosper the better many yeares for one yeares charity to the poore. And whereas here are amongst you many priuate merchants, tradesmen, and Artificers that from some hundreds, are risen to an estate of ten, twenty, thirty thousand pounds, let not these mighty estates now bee wedged vp in a corner; no bring forth those riches that are bound as it were fetters, and triumph ouer them as slaues; let the poore feele yee to be rich; take vp these poore as commodities: yea haue trafficked much beyond Seas, trade amongst these at home; to get aduantage yee haue trusted men with much, let me entreat you to trust God with part. And oh yee which haue set your faces (in a more particular manuer) towards Sion, which haue a name to liue, seeme not you to haue renounced the delights of the world, but not the desires; shal your hands be shut & yet are your hearts opened? will yee honour Christ with a Psalm, or a Chapter, or a prayer in the parlour, & yet driue him away from the doore with a staffe, or a frowne? Yee damne a Drunkard, an Adulterer, a Sabbath-breaker, a Blasphemer, and yee doe well, but will yee magnifie a Worldling? where doe yee euer finde S. Nabal? well, bee not ghosts of profession, blisters of Religion; I honour your profession so it bee as full of charity, as pietie. But otherwise remember that of the Apostle, Who soeuer hath this worlds goods, and seeth his brother in want, and shutteth vp his bowels of compassion, how dwelleth the loue of God in him? I will haue mercy and not sacrifice. Pure religion, and undefiled before God the Father is this, to visit the Fatherlesse and Widowes in their aduersity. Let no man say then I haue Wife and Children to maintaine (as if thy cares were onely to bee restrained to these) remember thou hast also a Iesus. Shew thy selfe a mysticall member of the Church, as well as a prouident Father of a family. Well, one and other now is your triall whereby men may see whether yee belong to God, or Mammon; now the time to Lay vp a good Foundation against gainst the time to come. Looke not onely therefore on your owne families, but on the distressed households; as yee want not meanes, so want not minds to doe good; feuer out something for the hungry and thirsty, designe not all your meanes and maintenance for your ownethroats, for that were to bee Nabals Professours: Shall I then take my Bread, &c.

Next seeing the Sessions are now to beginne, let mee entreate all you that haue here any interest in them, to take some prouident course for the poore, let them taste of your charity aswell as your justice; to hang vp felons, and not to provide for maintenance, is almost to force theeueto the gallowes; the poore are at an exigent, if they heare not of some speedy intendments for their comfort (I tremble to speake it) they are ready to lay their blood to your charge: whom haue they heere next vnder God but your selues to betake themselves to for refuge in their extremities? Oh therefore whatsoeuer yee resolute on else, decree something for charity; count it no dishonour to this meeting to haue it stiled a Sessions of charity, though they meet with churlishnesse elsewhere: yet I beseech you, let them not find Nabal vpon the Bench.

Further, least (as Themistius said of the flatterers in the Court of Iovian) I should seeme to feare the purple Robes, more then the Wrath of God, giue mee leaue to speake something vnto you the Knights and Gentlemen that in these hard times are resorted into the Citie; as yee haue most meanes, so shew not yee least mercy. That charity therefore that yee are to enioyne your neighbours in the Countrey to shew, first make it exemplary in your selues; if plenty stop her current, how will the shallow brookes afford a few drops? yee left behind you good orders in your Countrey, why did yee not stay to see them executed, and to giue life to them by your presidents of mercy; His Maiesty (whom God for ever blese) out of his pious disposition, sincere compassion, and pectorall affection to the present distresses commaunded your preience in the Countrey, why then haue yee oppugned his Royall pleasure? will yee vilifie his proclamations, and edicts, as if they were but matters of forme? would yee count it a dishonour to you now to bee thrust out of his Commission? thinke then what a dishonour yee offer him, thus to put a Brave vpon his Order. Give me leaue to discharge my conscience towards my God and my King. I will not speake what I could concerning this, yet thus much I must tell you, that if you stay heere long, yee will hazard to loose that which is many great mens Paradise, your honour in your Countrey. Should such a man as I flee? sayd Nehemiah; so should such men as you, now haue forsaken your Countrey? There are some Gentlemen I confesse (for whom God be prayed, and their names euer honoured) that haue kept their houses, and maintained an Odour of Charitie at their thresholds, but as for you (I must speake truth in this place, and at this time) yee seeme to feelee too much of a deere yeere, yee are afraid of your Christmas boxe; ye haue fledde into the fortified places, as if there were an invasion in the land; and seeme to haue left off to bee true Countrey-men, and to bee turned new-created Citizens; inso much that as Oviedo for the great confluence of Bishops thither in the time of the Mores Conquests in Spaine, was called the Citty of Bishops, so this Citty will hazard to lose the name, and be called the Citty of Knights and Gentlemen; ye are left out of the Charter, and yet ye seeme to bee of the Body politique. Heere ye take vp your mansions, and vse your houses in the Countrey, but as Pallaces of pleasure. But one time in the yeare to doe good, but one yeere intwenty, and yee are Non residents from your places. If yee doe any good here, yee doe it but like a Minister that leaueth his owne Cure, to goe feede other mens flockes; your company heere is neither desired, nor needed

Purpuram magis quam Deum colere.
Nixeph. Call. lib. 10. c. 42.

Neh. 6. 11

Turqent.

needed. If yee have done any good where yee should, it is but as a dramme to that pound yee ought to haue expended in such a scarcity. Oh that ye heard the lamentable cryes, and bitter exclamations of the poore against you, they say yee preterre your hawkes, and horses, and hounds before them; for thirty poundes for an hawke, forty poundes for an horse, an hundred poundes for houndes, and though thet dye within a moneth after, yee thinke it stands not with generous mindes to grieue for the losse of them, but there is no such bountie and freeness to the poore; the Hawke is fed whilest the poore euen famish, the Horse pampered whilest the poore euen pine, the houndes haue their set provision, whilest the delicatest fare many poore haue, is but course bread, and the strongest liquor, faire water; a pittifull thing, when birds, and beastes, and dogges, are preferred before Christian soules. I condemne not your lawfull pleasures, but I condemne those pleasures that turne Hospitality out of dores. Ponder vpon these things, and if your hearts be not of flint, and all the quicke flesh in your boloms turned into Adamant, I trust they will dissolue into pittie; for consider in your selues, is this to bee Common-wealths-men, no Private wealths-men, Christians? no Newters. Oh therefore let these advertisements be as a Habeas Corpus, to remooue you to your proper dwellings; and goe not thither, I humbly beseech you, onely to shew your foreheades, but your mercy to helpe the helpelesse, to succour the succourlesse, to disperse abroad your Bread, Water, and Flesh, and not to serve it in, only to your owne tables, for that were to bee Nabals housekeepers. Shall I then (sayth Nabal) take my Bread, Water, and Flesh, which I haue killed for my Shearers, and giue it vnto men, whom I know not whence they bee?

And because Salomons Wise Woman not onely lifted Pror. 31.
up her hand to the distaffe, but likewise stretched out her hand to the needy, Giue mee leaue to exhort, that if the Master should be Nabal, yet that the Mistresse bee Abigail to tell Nabal of his Charlishnesse, and by her discreetest and powerfullest perswasions, and inducements, to seeke to reclayme him; howsoever to prevent Gods heavy curses vpon the family, let her goe forth to men in misery with her bottels of milke, her parched corne, her frayles of rayns and figges: the Wife indeed hath not power to dispose of her husbands estate at her pleasure, but for true Charity shee hath, why else are women in Scripture exhorted to be Charitable?

And you my reuerend brethren of the Clergy, if euer yee would have your wordes like Apples of gold set vpon Pictures of silver, know what is a word in due season; shew ye to the World miseries, naked armes, and bring forth hunger, ready to eat her owne flesh; cause the cheekes of couetousnesse to blush, and the heart of parsimony to chinke in the bosome; by your most pregnant motives, and prevalent charmes, endeavour to raise vp a race of Charity in the World; that so if people should remaine inflexible, incorrigible, yet as his Majestie sayd (after his Pious Orders given for the reliefe of the poore, if they were not put in execution) his Throne should bee Innocent, so the Pulpit may bee innocent. What should wee doe now filling the eares of the people with our sublimated conceptions, Scrapphicall subtilties? Alas, they have need of mercy. In these distressefull times therefore, what a sweete Odour is the sent of Charity out of our Pulpits? Roderigo de Ximenes by preaching of Sermons of Charity in such a great scarcity, was revered of the people as an Angel of God, and so honoured by Alphonso, that hee bestowed vpon him the Arch-Bishopricke of Toledo, worth above two hundred thousand Crownes by the yeere; so by such kind of Doctrines wee shall get reverence vpon earth, honour in Heauen; and though our labours should not take place with men, sure we are, Our labour shall be with the Lord.

Lastly,

R Turquet in the life of Alphonso the Noble.

Et. 49. 4.

Lastly, to speake vnto you the distressed soules of the times, I wish you comfort from Heauen, patience vppon earth; though grace cannot keepe you from being insensible of these miseries, yet let it keepe you from being impatient; it is your time of triall, Oh blaspheme not God to his face, but with all meekenesse, and humble lowly submission, yeeld your selues vnto Gods chastisement, endure a kind of dry Martyrdome. And as I wish you patience towards Gods chastisement, so towards mans churlishnesse; though men should bee open-mouthed to reproch, and close-fingered to releue you, yet lift not vp an arme of revenge; no, I beseech you by the peace of your Countrey, and by the honour of your profession, that yee fall out into no rash, precipitate, tumultuous rebellious courses. Remember, that David being denied reliefe at Nabals hand, at first hee seemed irritated, incensed; yea he vowed ruine, euen to rippe vp the bowels of the Churle, to make his house a shambles, but that which Rage resolues on, Grace repents of; at last how doeth hee honour God, and blesse the instrument that stayed him from that bloody purpose? 1. Sam. 25. Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, which sent thee this day 32, 33. to mee. And blessed be thy adaise, blessed bee thou which hast kept mee this day from comming to shedge blood, and from auenging my selfe with my owne hand.

Magnifie not Worldlings therefore as Worthies (no pittie it is such painted postes should bee stooped vnto) nor bee not your owne carvers of satisfaction from them; Let euen Charles liue to their greater ignominy, damnation; Vengeance in God were just, but in you barbarous, and inhumane; Rebellion is the fruit of vnregenerate nature; Commend therefore your fainting soules vnto God in silence, rather then force releefe; the poore mans weapon is his tongue, not his pike; though they may be guilty of hard heartednesse, mercilesnesse, yet be not ye guilty of blood.

And

And now Lord, bow thou the hearts of people vnto Charitie, melt them into compassion, let them not bee ashamed of Christ, hungry, and naked, but as they looke for Heaven, so let them lay vp treasures for their selues in Heaven, and that for his sake that purchased Heaven with the price of his owne blood, euen Iesus Christ the righteous. To whom with thee

O Father, and the Blessed Spirit, bee ascribed, all Honour, Glory, Praise, Power, might, Maiestie, and Dominion, from this time forth
for euermore,
Amen.

M O S E S O L D S Q V A R E F O R I V D G E S.

Delivered in a Sermon in the Greene-yard in NORWICH, the 17.
of Iuly, 1631.

By THO. REEVE, Minister of Gods Word at COLEBY in NORFOLKE.

L O N D O N,
Printed by AUGUSTINE MATHEVVE,
for JOHN GRISMOND, and are to be
sold by EDVVARD MARTIN of Norwich.

1 6 3 2.

To all the Honourable Iudges of the Nation, vncorrupt Iudgement at their owne Tribunals, and comfortable Iudgement at Gods Tribunall.

Honourable, and reverend Iudges :

If the name of a Law-giver be acceptable vnto you, here is Moses ; if iust iudgement pretious, here it is as liuely, as truly deciphered ; ye neede not disdain this counsaile, for it is the breathing of Moses wise-dome, nor refuse to take measure by it, for it is the meiwand of integrity ; Tea, not Moles meere, but God ioyntly prescribe the orders, impose the charge ; God and Moses, therefore I trust shall prevaile with them that sit in the place of God, and execute the office of Moles ; As ye learne much out of your owne volumes, to informe your understandings, so take something from hence to quicken conscience ; Were ye never so sage and discreet, able to satisfie all doubts so soone as they are propounded, and to resolue all difficulties without a demurre, yet practise is the praise and blisse of Iudges ; to this ye are here vrged, and incited ; and oh feele the impulsives of this counsaile, let not Moses mouth yet seeme to be shut. Iustice exalts a Nation ; Oh as ye loue your Prou. 14. 34.
Nation, exalt it, which ye can never doe, except ye bring Iustice into her full vigour. Iustice is enfeebled, the Nation depressed where there are wicked Iudges ; there neede no greater plague to a Country, nor Bane to a Kingdome, then to have the Benches of authority infected. When the wicked are in authority, the people sigh. As a roaring Lyon, and a hungry Beare, so is a Pro. 29. 2. wicked Ruler over the poore people. Davids greatest pu- Pro 28. 15. nishment that hee would wish of God for that intestine enemy against him and the Church, was this. Set thou a wicked man to be Ruler over him. How carefull and faithfull ought Iudges Psal. 109. 6. 4 there-

The Epistle Dedicatorie.

therefore to be to ease the griefes, and remedy the mischiefes of the Common-wealth. Remisnesse gives lustice the assault, but Corruption puts it to the rout; Let not torpulence therefore possesse you in that place; but above all, let not bribery fasten vpon you; for if Iudges should looke broad eyed after lurre, or goe tracing after their owne advantages, the whole Kingdome were but a Burrow for them to ferret advantage out of. Oh therefore let every Iudge consult with his soule, and argue with his conscience vpon what secret purposes, and inward resolutions hee tooke this high calling vpon him, and let every one be a Iudge to passe sentence vpon himselfe how innocent, and inculpable hee hath beene, whether in his whole course the Glory of God, the Common good, and not his private, hath beene his constant study, ayme, exercise. Vpon this let every one ponder, for I boldly censure none, but humbly admenish all. And those Iudges that vpon these things can vprightly discharge themselves before God, and the World, what are they but the Mirrours of Worth, and the Wonders of government? their places have added to their Honours, but not to their sinnes, to cure a feeble estate, they have not wounded conscience; these Iudges engrave reverence into the hearts of the people, by their deserts whilst they are living, & when they dye, people become halfe dead without them, their hearts aking, and their eyes trickling a long time after that they have lost the presence of such renowned memorable Governours. Thus let all Iudges dignifie their callings, blesse their places and Circuits, that wheresoever there be blemishes, enormities, yet the Iudges may be spotlesse. And thus with all humility, and due submission, I commend my Labours to your favourable construction, and your Labours to Gods gracious direction.

Your Lordships in all Christian service and duty,

THO. REEVE.

M O S E S

OLD S Q A R E

FOR

I V D G E S.

DEUT. 1. 16. 17.

I charged the Iudges at that same time, saying, Heare the controuerfies of your brethren, iudge righteoufly betweene enery man and his brother, yea the stranger that is with him.

Ye shall haue no respect of persons in iudgement, but shall heare the small as well as the great, ye shall not feare the face of man, for the iudgement is Gods.

Great is the burthen of Authority; not onely great the beauty, but great the burthen; all feele it, the best most; Moses as stout, iust, wife as any; yet the weight of this makes my shoulders shrink, saith he: Non possum sustinere, I cannot beare you my selfe alone; Non possum sustinere, quia non possum numerare, I cannot beare you, for I cannot number you. The Lord hath multiplied you, and ye are as the starres in number. What should one Magistrate, Moses, doe with such a multitude? A Common-wealth, yea such an one as

*—Fessa labor
mihi pondere
cervix.*

Ver. 9.

Ver. 10.

—*Sape coorta
est seletio, sa-
uitq; animis
ignobile vul-
gus.*
Ver. 12.

*Moses tremendi fidus inter-
pres Throni Prudent,*

Aug.

Omnia Mercurio simili.
Ver. 15.

hath a Church for a title of perfection added to it, will not alwayes liue in harmony ; No, there will be jarring strings, instruments out of tune, cumbrances, troubles, strife ; and How can I alone beare your cumbrances, troubles, strife ? A man may better beare any burthen then man, or especially man in his turbulencies ; Ye may thinke it easie (saith Moses) but it troubles my wits ; How can I ? Ye may suppose I can, and a pleasure ; but I finde it a matter of greater difficulty, yea euen of impossibility. How can I ? Though Moses got morall learning enough in Egypt, yea Heauen acknowledged him for her Disciple, God vpon mount Sinai face to face teaching him mysteries for Religion, maximes for policie, informing him, inspiring him, yea, Moses being the lively interpreter of the secrets of Gods Throne, yet he confesseth himselfe not gifted enough for this calling ; I cannot beare, ye see in one place, How can I beare in another place. So that Moses must haue Helpers, Non potest sustinere, therefore he must substituere ; He cannot beare all himselfe, therefore hee must goe borrow shoulders, goe get Substitutes : Now for these hee desireth that Moses might be found in euery one, that as Christ when he went vp to heauen, dedis Alium se, for the gouernment of his Church, He gaue another like himselfe ; So Moses being to share his gouernment, he would conuay (if it were possible) a feuerall Moses into euery iurisdiction, that euery one might relemble his pat-terne ; therefore he chose men as nigh as he can of his owne endowments, and integrity ; Wise, and knowne men. Wise for their iudgement, Knowne for their behauour ; for what should people doe with Stupie, or sordid Magistrates ? no, this were to make the Magistrate himselfe a Burthen, Magistrates not thoroughly qualified, are but daily eye-sores to the people, or lifted vp to derision, fitter to beget more troubles, then to settle distractions : Therefore Moses himselfe Wise and knowne, herein shewes both his wit, and grace in getting perfect extracts of himselfe, persons that should carry in them viue characters of his worth ; full of perspicuity, and integrity of acrimony of judgement, and sanctimony mony of life; Wise, and knowne men; Well, these being the men designed deputed, why goe they not abroad to shew their lustre? no, they want one thing still, to heare a Charge; to heare a Charge, that must beare a Charge; and Moses was not more curious in his choise, then hee is solemne in his Charge; for how exactly, pointly doth he here descant vpon gouernment in her prime? Heare the controuersies of your brethren, iudge righteously betweene euery man, and his brother, yea, the stranger that is with him; And how doth he fortifie them against all the Glorioes Pompaticks of the times? Ye shall haue no respect of persons in iudgement, but shall heare the small as well as the great, ye shall not feare the face of man; and how piercingly doth he summe vp all? For the iudgement is Gods: So that Moses doth heere institute Iudges, and instruct them; that they might be as worthy, as necessary, here is counsaile pertinent, pregnant. Moses charged the Iudges, and who hath more neede of a Charge then Iudges? they are not to take vp a chayre of authority onely amongst their brethren, but to heare their controuersies; and not to haue power in their hands to pleasure their friends, but to iudge righteously betweene euery man and his brother, yea to the very stranger that is with him; And though Greatnesse may be formidable amongst the Infimates, yet authority it selfe is not to be daunted, awed by it; no, let these change colour before the Iudges, and not the Iudges dread them. Ye shall haue no respect of persons in iudgement, but shall heare the small as well as the great, ye shall not feare the face of man. What is the reason? because Iudges are not to render an account to these great men, but to the great God; his is the calling, his the Iudgement. The Iudgement is Gods. I charged the Iudges, &c.

In the words obserue.

1. An enforcement. I charged the Iudges.
2. The substance of it. Heare the Controuersies of your brethren, iudge righteously betweene euery man and his brother, and the stranger that is with him. Yee shall haue no respect of persons in iudgement, but shall heare the small small as well as the great, yee shall not feare the face of man.

3. An Inducement. For the iudgement is Gods.

First for the Inforcement. I charged the Iudges. In which consider { 1. The nature of it, a Charge. I charged.

2. The persons vpon whom it is imposed, Iudges.

Doct.

*Iussa capeffere
fas est.*

In preceptis de-sudandum est.

Thalaff.

2. Hecatont.

Deum iudicem & vindicem

habes. Bulling.

in 2. Tim. 4.

Importat rationem debiti.

Tho. 12<sup>x</sup> 99. q.

1. art.

Tho. Aq.

Exod. 19. 21.

Marke 8. 15.

For the nature of it, I charged. From whence obserue, that for a weighty duty a Charge is of great validity to enforce it. Strict commands every one ought to undertake. Not hardy; but precipitate let his name bee that puts the dare vpon a Charge; a Charge leaues not a thing arbitrary, or onely giues counsell to performe it; but it goes vnder the nature of a precept, and men ought to sweat in performance of precepts; if the brow doe not sweat in obediences the heart may chill in the neglect; for to neglect a charge is to enthrall to a curse. It hath God for the Censurer and avenger. Iustice is the forme of it, therefore not to liue in conformity to it is to abandon that that giues due proportiō to all things, Iustice; it imports the nature of a Debt, and hee stands vnder the hazard of attaching, that payes not his debts. It hath prudence for the direction of it, the restraining of the concupiscible passions for the matter, and loue and reuerence for the motiues; so that hee that maketh a breach of a charge oppugnes wisdom, liues in vassallage to his own passions, & extinguisheth all loue & reuerence out of his heart. In all solemne things it hath beene vied as the thing most forcible; as in Mount Sinab when God would not bee eyed by man no further then hee reuealed himselfe, to repress curiosity, Charge the people (saith God) that they breake not their bounds to goe vnto the Lord to gaze; and that the disciples of Christ might not bee infected with the subtilties of false doctrines, and enchantments of Court-pompes, but that they might goe on as men stablished in the truth, and mortified towards all worldly delights, Christ charged his disciples saying, Beware of the leaven of the Pharisees, and Herod. And that Worldlings might neither be proud, proud, nor penurious, Charge them that are rich in this world 1. Tim. 6 17. that they be not high minded &c. And that they be ready to distribute & communicate. And Timothy himself that he might use fidelity & sedulity in his calling, saith Paul, I charge thee before God and the Lord Iesus Christ who shall iudge both the quick and the dead at his appearance, Preach the word, be instant in season, and out of season. So that Moses here doth not use any weake inducement, but a strong Enforcement. I charged, saith Moses. This serues to exhort, them whom this most concernes not to vilifie, howsoever not to nullifie the force of a Charge; but with eares tingling to heare the tenure of it, and hearts melting to satisfie the sanctions of it. One word the Hebrewes put for a Charge comes of a word that signifies a Goad; as if a Charge should be as a Goad to force to obedience. A true obedient heart neuer considers how great a thing is commanded, but resolves upon performance, because it is commanded. How can that be counted a triuiall thing, that is Charged? how can the neglect of that be safe; that is, Charged? no, vilipend not a Charge, violate not a Charge; for great is the Impery of it, it carrieth a viuid obstriction in it. Oh therefore goe away with a sacred awe in your bosomes to what it imposes, enjoynes; hold your selues sub vinculo, bound over to obedience, Charged. I charged, saith Moses; not I exhorted, but I charged.

Vse.

Melamedb.

à

Malmadb.

Non attendit
verum obediens
quale sit quod precipitur, hoc
solo contentus
quia precipi-
tur. Bern.

The Iudges.

Now let vs come to the persons vpon whom it is imposed, Iudges.

From whence obserue, that it is not to breake compassie vpon very Iudges to impose a Charge. For is it impossible for them to haue their checkes in gouernment? may there not be even a Reprobate vnder the scarlet Robes? hath the furnace of hell had neuer a fire-brand from the Tribunal? doth the Compasser forbear to tempt where hee sees the ballance of iustice held out? no, the Serpent hath profest enmity to all the Womans seed, wheresoever the Deuill finds concupiscence to lodge, he endeauours to make it his

Mat. 5. 48.
*Demonstrat
 officium, sed
 non potentiam.*

*Optandū est ut
 fiat, conandum
 est ut fiat, sup-
 plicandum est
 ut fiat sed quod
 factum fuerit cōfidendum non
 est. Aug.
 Erigat scalam & solus in cæ-
 lum ascendat.
 Zozemen. lib.
 I. c. 11.
 Comparatione
 non consumma-
 tione, Bern.
 Gratia non immobilitat.
 Aug.
 Tho. Aq.*

1. Sam 8. 3.
 1. Kings 21.

port-hole to enter at. Oh that wee could find men so innocent that wee need not quake over their defections, persons so absolute that wee need not counsell them; these might bee Mirrours fit for the bright eye of God to take full delight in; but alas such is our imperfect state that though the guilt of sinne may bee remitted many, yet the inhesion of sinne is in all; though the dominion of sinne may bee remoued in some, yet in none the pronity vnto sinne. What man hath in him Perfection of degrees? no, this God requires, Be perfect as your heavenly Father is perfect; but it shewes our duty to strue for it, not our power to attaine to it; there may bee in vs righteousnesse which (they call) the righteousnesse of the cause, but not of the person; the exercise of new-obedience may bee in vs, but not the exactnesse; no, it is to bee wished, it were so, it is to be deuoured it may bee so, it is to bee prayed it should be so, but that it is so, it is not to bee beleueed. Shew mee that friend of God that dare plead inuolablenesse of affection towards his Maker, no hee might then goe let up a ladder and goe alone into heauen as Constantine told Acesius, the strict Novatian Bishop; such repurged creatures are not to bee had in this world; iust men wee may haue, but they are rather iust in comparison with others, then in compleatnesse in themselves. Grace doth not stablish men in the seruice of God, neuer to fall; no, this is a perfection fit for the vpper Court, it is the priuiledge of Angels which are confirmed in grace: wee may bee free from presumptuous sinnes, but not from lapses: our chiefe honour lies not in perfection of goodnesse, but affection to it; as the purest body hath in it contrary elements, so the most regenerate man hath in him two natures. Iudges then, though neuer so wise, may erre, though neuer so vpright faile. Doe wee neuer read of wicked Iudges? yes, the sonnes of Samuel, were Iudges, but did they not translate judgement? or turne the outside of it? what should I terme it? they peruerterd it; the Elders of Iezreel were Iudges, but did they not for a peece of royall paper, for a Court charme condemne a man of high-
 trea-

treason? as if in Iezreel to condemne men of high-treason were but the high-triall of a Iudges wit; and were those Iudges in the 1. of Habbacucke thinke yee in culpable, when the Law was dissolued, and iudgement did not goe forth? the Law dissolued, as if the ioyns of it had beene taken out, and iudgement did not goe forth, as if it had layen bedrid at the Bench. Remember yee not the saying of Solomon? I saw vnder the Sunne the place of iudgement where was wickednesse, and the place of iustice where was iniquity; the very seats of authority polluted. There was a Iudge in a certaine Citty, that neither feared God, nor reuerenced man; though a Parable, yet parables speake not of impossibilities. So that the dignity and authority of Iudges doe not priuiledge them from errour, therefore these may bee charged? I charged the Iudges saith Moses.

1 Habbac. 4.

Eccles. 3. 16.

Luke 18. 2.

Vse.

This serues to exhort Iudges not to count this worke superfluous, much lesse rash to deliuer a Charge to them. When I looke vpon the dignity of your callings I behold this with an eye of reuerence, when I looke vpon your danger of digressing I behold this with an eye of feare. Even in iudgement there are priuy perils. Let Iudges looke to their innocency, for their hazard to fall is great. The face of all parts stands in most danger of a skarre, the tops of houses are most subject to gunne shot, the fairest fruit is most likely to bee plucked; therefore though high and honourable, great men and wise men, yet men, and so subject to Satans assaults. Oh therefore know your feet to stand but in slippery places, shake your hearts and feele in them the dregs of naturall corruption, looke towards your Tribunals, and behold a multitude of temptations ready to encounter you. Oh therefore let not the blood rise in your faces, much lesse boyle in your hearts, that any expegefactory aduertisements should bee deliuered to you; no, heare counsell with patience, yea a charge without regrate; though Iudges yet yee may bee charged, yea because Iudges therefore charged; wee must not Saint all Iudges, or howsoeuer if Saint you, yet not hold you men of impeccant spirits, though

Ceca pericula.
Propert.
Caveant criminum magnum enim discrimen
Aug.

though Judges, yet not Angels; no, I see in you humane nature, and therefore I know you to bee subject to humane frailties; yee may erre as well as others, and therefore yee may be charged as well as others. I charged the Judges.

But here let vs make a stand, and aske why Judges?
1. Because they must haue judgement. 2. Because they must execute judgement.

First because they must haue judgement. But vpon this I need not to insist, for these are known to bee no blind Judges, beyond expectation they haue giuen satisfaction to the Countrey concerning their wisdom; therefore before such Judges I should seeme to want judgement to discourse of that judgement that is requisite for Judges.

Therefore to leaue this Stand, and to come to the executing of judgement. Judges because they must execute judgement. For knowledge belongs to the vnderstanding, action properly to the will, and should the Judges vnderstanding bee furnished, and his will haue no exercise? Actio intimates the beginning of motion; what therefore should a Judge neuer moue, but onely grow vp in knowledge? this were like one that should waxe vp to mans stature, but neuer stirre foot; therefore as a Judge hath gotten the strength of his limmes in knowledge, so hee should moue in correcting those vices that his vnderstanding directs him to take knowledge of; Correction is the pruning hooke of disorder, the fanne of villany; many here know the Law, Judges are chiefly to execute it; that Judge therefore is most conspicuous, who is as resolute in carriage, as absolute, in vnderstanding; who hath animum & animositatem, knowledge, and courage: A Judge must not onely bee profound in his owne grounds, nor bee expert onely to deliuer a Charge (which notwithstanding is a rare ingeny) but hee must giue Malefactours their deserued doome, draw blood from ranke-spirited liuers, and shew to the world, that Iustice hath her edge; A Judge must bee endewed with the same affection, that Law-giners themselues were, that their lawes may not remaine onely in peeces of paper but bee

Write

Aristot.

*Actio importat
originem mo-
tus* Aquia.

Nigrum prae-figere Theta.

*quod Legistatores dictum
Lysiae Stob.
ser. de magi-
strat.*

written in capitall Letters vpon offenders backes; It is as evill (saith Cato) not to punish an high offence, as not to re-quite a great good turne, Lawes not executed are like Lyons chained vp, Canons mounted vpon the walls of a Ci-tie never discharged, potions in the Apothecaries shop neuer administred. Isoocrates would teach one learning for a small matter, but the maine schoolefee was to teach that party boldnesse: So boldnesse is as necessary in Magistrates as vnderstanding, and the executing of judgement, as the knowledge of it. Because judgement is not executed speedily, therefore the hearts of the children of men are fully set to doe evill. Wickednesse runs in her full-tide, and sinne comes to the authority of a hellish viceroy vnder heartlesse, and remisse Iudges; as the chiefe vertue of fire therefore is not in the shining but the burning, so the chiefe vertue of a Iudge is not to haue judgement, but to execute it.

*Pro maleficio perpetrato non dare poenam
 quam pro leneficio non dare gratiam*
Plut. in apo-theg.

Ecccl. 8. 11.

This serues to exhort Iudges to make themselves as much feared for their judgments, as admired for their wise-domes; for else they shall seeme but Sages to the people, not fully Iudges; oh therefore let every artery of your hearts, abound with the spirit of magnanimity, and all the sinewes on your armes gather strength to punish offenders; strike at their estates, let out their blood; for such a Iudge is not a Man-slayer, but a mischiefe-slayer, he hath not polluted his hand with blood, but made it the cleaner, as Chryso- stome sayd of Phinees; oh therefore, euen deuote your selues to suppress wicked liuers, which are nothing else but the scandals of Religion, and the ignominies of all good Lawes; yea, let the reformation of the corruptions, and the exorbitances of the times bee so deeply fixed in your hearts, that yee count every enormous incorrigible offender that ye leaue behind you vnpunished, a blemish to your Tribunall. Blessed be the name, and magnified be the ver-tues of that renowned Iudge once in this circuit. I am speaking of Iudges, and how can I conceale that Iudge? I am encouraging of Iudges, and how can I better animate them, then in presenting before their eyes that Brest of Courage?

*Non homicidia
 sed malecias.
 Bern.*

*Non inquinuit manum
 sanguine sed puriorem red-
 didit.*

*Chryl. orat 1.
 in Iudgos.*

Cantari dig-nitas.

*Sed Sagitarios.
Appian.]*

Quint Curt.

*Plut.
Quasi publica
colens.
Plut.*

A man worthy to be celebrated. Hee was the Oracle of his dayes, the miracle of gouernment; the honor of vertue, the sting of disobedience; his worth, as great as his wisdom, yea, we know not which most to commend in him, his discretion or districtnesse; the very profession of the Lawes, and the name of a Iudge, the more respected amongst vs for his sake. He not onely punished offenders brought before him, but made it his study and care to discouer Latitants, Yea, at his cost and charge searched them out; Hee neuer feared the power of any offender, but onely desired to lay hold on him, as the auncient Lacedemonians neuer asked the strength of their aduerfaries, but onely where they were. As Cassius, when hee was wished by the Caldean Astrologer, not to fight whilest the signe was in Scorpio. I feare not (saith he) Scorpio, but the Archers, (Hee meant the Parthians) So hee feared not the greatest Scorpion in the world, but the Iudgements of God, those Archers; the very mould of courage seemed to haue beene in his heart, as Pyrrius sayd of the old Romanes; hee burst into the lurking holes of the most desperate offenders, as Perdicas brake into a Lyonnesse den, and tooke away her whelps; yea the more dangerous the offender was, the greater was his pleasure to encounter him, as when one told Leonides, that he now had enemies indeed to fight with, for the multitude of their arrowes was such, that they would euen darken the light of the Sunne-beames; So much the better (said he) For then wee shall fight in the shade. In that Iudges dayes, wickednesse stroke with a trembling hand, and villany slept with a troubled eye; himselfe as much feared as the paynes of a convulsion, and his Spies as much feared as himselfe; his pitched battels in the Tribunall, were memorable, and his stratagems abroad matchlesse; another, Valerius, that might haue beene named Publicola, as if he had wholly studi d the publique welfare, and might as deservedly haue had the surname of Couragious, as ever Aristides had of Iust. The veins of the Country haue stil in them the better blood for that Surgeon, the lights of the Nation yet shine shine the brightlier for that Golden Snuffer. He lived with affections of thousands, and dyed with the praises of millions; his name yet precious, and his memory yet scarce thought on without teares. I praise him, I honour him, I magnifie him, because I desire he might be prized, imitated equalled. My honourable Lords, be transformed into your honourable president; as ye want not his power, so want not his courage; oh let his heroicall vertues (as the Morrallists terme them) liue in you, as ye know Iudgement with him, so execute Iudgement with him, suffer not the brow of impudence to out-front civility, nor sinne to put the dare vpon authority; least people desire a resurrection too soone of this Iudge, or digge him out of his graue, as they did Antiochus when his good gouernment was wanted, or they cry Vbi sunt Indices? Where are our Iudges. Oh therefore stabbe murderers to the heart, calme the spirits of common Barretours, restraints the licentiousnesse of Ruffians.

*Antiochum
refodso.*

First, stabbe murderers to the heart, which kill men till they seeme not to be men, but as it was sayd of Tiberius Dirt mingled with blood; yea., spill blood that they might write their selues in redde letters, Valorous. Bloodshed in these dayes being but with many held the cognisance of Noble resolution; the sight of the Common-wealth stabbed through with so many murders, is as hideous as the sight of Iulius Caesars Robe was to the Senate-house, stabbed through with so many holes; these blush to digest an injury, but never to reuenge it with blood; the price of murder being accounted with these, but the purchasing of a Pardon (if it could bee gotten) or a voyage for a while beyond Seas; the clipping of the Kings coyne seemes more odious and dangerous in the murderers account, then the destroying of the Image of God; many a man seemes nobody to himselfe, vnlesse he bee an Hercules furens, and hath given the stabbe, and that perhaps but for taking the right hand, or not pledging a carrouse, or but for requiring of a due debt, or for the detection of the least error of a monsters life. Oh shall not the Iudges cares tingle at the noise of this.

Lutum sanguine maceratum. Sueton.

Plut in Antonio.

Num. 35. 33.

this crying sinne? shall such die vpon a pillow, and not goe bleeding to their graves? No, let neither mediation of friends, nor the sight of a scutchion make the Iudges heart relent from striking the cut-throats sword into his owne bowels. The land cannot bee cleansed of the blood that is shed therein, but by the blood of him that shed it, therefore stabbe murderers to the heart.

2

Luke 8. 27.

Secondly, charme the spirits of common Barretours, whose cheefe practise is to runne to the Lawyers anvil, for sharpe instruments, and which vse the Kings writs but as Westminster mastiffes, to bait the Country with; were it not for this franticke rowt, how many busie Attourneys, and extimulating Counsaylers (for of such only doe I speak) might walke like the Lunaticke man in the Gospell without clothes: What a Mart of trialls is there at this time like to be? 300. Nisiprissess and oode, brought down to one Affises; and what, all for recouery of due debts, or for dubitable Titles? no, I doubt if many of them were well leached into, they should be found to bee but for spights and quarrells; for the will of a common Barretour is as tender vnto him as his inheritance, let such be but touched, and presently the sting is put out; as no man offended Caligula, but in a most vnseemely manner, he shaved off the hayre of the hinder part of his head, so whosoever distast these they set their fowle Law-markes vpon them; a tryall or else no triall of their magnanimity, euery trifle is made a grand trespassse, writs and Sub-pœna's fly abroad, they bite all that come nigh them, and like sparkling coales they scorch the faces of them that doe but blow vpon them; their displeased affections are so implacable that there is no appeasing of them till they haue made their enemies goe a pilgrimage through all the Courts of Iustice, and by the glisters and potions of costs and fees, they haue fetched them off their leggs, or brought them to their graues. And what now shall a common Barretor be Amicus Curie, counted a friend to the Court? a contemptible Court that should entertaine such for friends; shall litigiousnesse out of audaciousnesse, dare to say that for a judgement-fee it can get any cause to passe? or that if it be found guilty, it knowes the sorest punishment, Cave in posterum, Take heede for afterwards? No, though their glozing factours may extoll such spightfull men for men of spirit, and collaud such bellish contenders as iust preservers of their rights, and reputations; yet as ye would not suffer all the streynes of our Church-service to be turned into the yellings of malice, and as ye would seeme truly sensible of the vexations of a tetricall rowt, and of the out-cryes of quiet men molested in their owne Countries, bring forth some of these Contenders to be made as odious to the world as they haue been grieuous, let the people see that our Land hath Law to punish spleene, calme the spirits of these common Barretours.

Thirdly, restraîne the licenciousnesse of Ruffians, Roarers, Swashbucklers, which vndermine the foundations of those houses their Fathers built; tiplers and harlots challenging their Patrimonies, rather then themselves; they were borne their Fathers eldest sonnes, but they haue made themselves since younger brethren; Which were once called Heyros, but the World hath come now and written downe, Spendthrifts: Oh the miserable spoyle of young Gentry in these dayes, insomuch that they which according to their birth and meanes should be adopted to gouerne their Countries, and to doe the best seruice to their Soueraigne, they are fit for nothing almost but to sing Catches, and send challenges; very vicers, and sinkes in the Common-wealth; which make Markets ring, and Cities roare; which rage as if they had beene brought vp in Bedlam, and sweare as if they newly came out of hell; which looke like Anticks, and talke like Pandars; which drinke till their faces sparkle like forges, and their stomacks spurge againe, in so much that as Tiberius that drunken Emperour, for Tiberius was called Biberius, and for Nero surnamed Mero; so these may rather be called Pottlemen then Gentlemen, and Liberines then Christians; they say they drinke by measure, but where no measure is, measure, where no measure is, there will not be to de-Sueton.

Novum genus
 hic mensura,
 ubi nullus est
 mensura mo-
 aus. Bas. Serm.
 1. de luxu &
 ebriet.

*Deploramus
patris nostrum quod ta-
lium malorum
et mater est,
et nutrix. Ba-
sil. ad Athanas.
cp. 47.*

scribe them, I cannot but deplore them; yea, as Basil saith, We deplore our Country to be the Mother, and Nource of such mischiefs. Could these euer have liued without fetters vpon their heeles, scarce with the skiane vpon their backes vnder the lawes of Paynims euen of Solon, Lycurgus, the famous Ephori, or the renowned Areopagites? and shall the names of Gallants here secure them? No (my Lords) let them not breake all bands of ciuility, as if here were a Theater built for Sensualists, nor defie God by day-light, as if they liued in a land of Thiefts; but seeing all our Sermons cannot fetch the intemperate humours out of their heads, let the law make them sober; restraine the licenciousnesse of Ruffians. Thus I might further desire you to crampe the hands of theeues, to worne the tongues of blasphemers, to disquiet them that trouble the Lords Rest, to disperse the society of Cheaters, to dissolue the brotherhood of Cutpurfes, to take away the Charter from that mighty Incorporation of Alehouse-keepers, but I cannot stand to dilate vpon all; onely thus much I say as there are wholesome lawes, so let there be resolute Iudges; by exemplary punishments, as by the keene edge of your power, leaue gashes in the sides of all notorious offenders. My Lords, I speake out of enuie against no mans person, but out of zeale enkindled to the glory of God, and an ardent affection to the rectifying of the grosse abuses of the times; Oh my Lords, let not vs stand here in vaine, stand not ye at a Tribunal in vaine; there are Wretches, be ye Iudges; ye haue Iudgement, execute Iudgement.

Hear the controuersies of your brethren, iudge righteously betweene euery man, and his brother, and the stranger that is with him, ye shall haue no respect of persons in iudgement, but shall heare the small as well as the great, ye shall not feare the face of man.

Now let vs come to the substance of the enforcement. In which obserue:

1. A full debating of causes, Hear the controuersies of your brethren.

2. A

2 A faire deciding, Iudge righteously.

3 A commendable impartiality, Betweene every man and his brother, and the stranger that is with him: ye shall have no respect of persons in iudgement, but shall heare the small as well as the great, ye shall not feare the face of man.

Hear the controuersies of your brethren.

First, for the full debating of causes. Hear the controuersies of your brethren. From whence obserue, that iust iudgement must begin at the eare. Nonne aures verba discernunt? Do not the eares discern words? and how can truth euer

Doct.

Job 12. 11.

Nisi agitentur cause, & partes audiuntur,

inter partes in-

dicare quis po-

test. Ber. 1. lib.

de Conf. ad

Eug. c. 10.

Job 34. 3.

Ut diligentius

seruanda est ea

porta qua via

fit Regia, Ita

audiamus, &c.

Plut.

Pro. 18. 5.

Reg. 3. from the 16. ver. to

the end of the Chapter.

Job 29. 6.

Deut. 1. 17.

Teste non in- iget. Bern.

Scientia visio-

nis. Tho. Aqu.

be discovered, if the words be not discerned? If causes be not thoroughly handled, and parties fully heard, who can passe sentence?

The eare is the taster of iudgement, for the eare trieth words, as the mouth tasteth meat; that man then can neuer relish the equity of a cause, whose taster is out of courte; if the eare be not open, the dore of Iustice is shut; yea, Iudges had as good stop their monthes, as stop their eares; therefore as that Port is to be well kept by which the Kings way lyes, so the hearing is to be carefully looked vnto, by which the royall path of Iustice lyes. The eare of the wise seeketh information. A wise eare is the most apposite Intelligencer of a Iudge, the Oracle at which hee should first consult, the Spy of truth, the Key of sentence. Salomon though neuer so wise, yet had the harlots cause fully opened, and did not instantly come to sentence; and Iob when he knew not the cause, he searched it out diligently; searched it out by due examining; and Moses for the great cause he commanded it should be brought before him, and he would heare it; not presently iudge it, but first heare it. God indeede is so absolute a Iudge, that he needs no

Witness, for in the bright Mirror of his owne wisdom at an instant he knowes all things that are done; but earthly

Iudges are not so exact, but they had neede to search, dis-cusse, to make narrow inspection, strict scrutiny, to haue perspicuous euidence, luculent testimonies deliuered before they can come to the full perception of things. He is one of Philip of Macedons Iudges, that will pronounce sentence before he consider proofes. Sententia, Sentence comes of Sentio to vnderstand, as if that sentence were senselesse, and that judgement without judgement, where euery thing is not duly and thoroughly weighed; if men may not bee heard in their owne causes, they had as good send for a Note vnder the Judges hand, how he will determine causes, as euer to bring them to triall, therefore controuersies must be heard; Heare the controuersies of your brethren.

Use.

Barbarica veritas. Apulcius. lib. 3. de as. au. reo. Iudicium tumultuarium.

This serues to counsaile Judges, to hold that Judgement most mature, that is vpon full hearing; not to hold themselves so absolute, that they can judge causes at their pleasure, nor so acute, that they can see the secrets of a cause by a superficial view, for then there is like to be but an homely truth, and a tumultuary judgement (as they call it) a judgement at hazard: Much lesse ought a Judge to debarre a man from speaking in his owne cause, but onely by his Lawyers lips; he is like to haue but a slender discovery of truth, that must speake all by a borrowed mouth; he hath not alwayes his minde fully layd open, that must hold him to his Interpreter; a man can manifest more out of his owne feeling, then his Spokesman can doe out of his Breuiat; many things may suddainly arise, which the Lawyer hath not beene fully instructed with, or if instructed, perhaps hee is troubled with Demosthenes his disease, the Iquinsie in the throat; the groanes of the people are grieuous against the treacherous carriages of these Heteroclitēs, which vary from the integrity of iust Pleaders, and are become men of another manner of declining; who if the opposite side can but shew them some golden Record, or pocket Euidence, or with the last nights present put them in minde of a new Bookecase, their opinion then is cleane altered, and their Clients case become desperate; that Plea that once looked like faire Inachis, is now turned into a Hayfer, and ready to burst. What then if the Lawyer bee struck dumbe with a stratagem, or will suppress any thing out of corruption, shall not the party himselfe be suffered to raspe in his owne case? may he not be permitted to be a Consonant with his Lawyer?
Must.

— Inq; niten-
sem Inachidos
vultu muta-
erat ille in-veniam.

Must his doome bee to stand at his Lawyers backe, and there gnash his teeth for his impertinent loquacity, or else shed teares for his perfidious silence; I know it were a burthen to authority to heare all men in their owne causes; for what should an eare bee lent to ignorant men whose language is all in solacismes, or clamorous, who when they haue no right thinke to raise vp one by multitude of words? No, it is sufficient, if not superabundant for the Lawyer to plead (I say not to feigne) for these; yet not to heare discreet, or iust men in their owne causes where in pleadings things are but darkely opened, or wretchedly concealed, I thinke were a violence offered to Iustice: for as I take it the Lawyer is but an assistant to his Client, or to put things into due forme, the other is still the Principall; the principall then must bee the fore finger in his owne cause, not turned off like a scunted finger.

And as it is fit that men sometimes in their owne causes should bee heard, so as requisite is it that witnesses might not be disturbed, for how then can Controversies bee heard? no, to molest witnesses is even to trouble that Fountaine from whence the cleere vnderstanding of a cause should flow, or to cry downe that voice that should giue sound satisfaction to the Iudge; Testis quasi tenens statum, say the *Criticke*s, A witness is one in whom the state of a case consists; Witnesses not to be regarded it is even to giue iudgement dimidiis, by the halves. Iudgement is a syllogisme (saith Auerroes) in which that Iudge can never draw out a good conclusion that doth not first consider the premises of Witnesses. When lawyers therefore can say litle for their clients, must their chiefe eloquence ly in casting aspersions vpon witnesses? or propounding captious questions to confound their memories? or deriding of them, as if they would turne from graue Pleaders to be of the jocular crew, even Iesters at Assises? No, I beseech you by that venerable respect yee beare to truth, that yee suffer full, and free testimony to bee deliuered, and that yee restraine such strident interpositions, for they tend rather for the Plato.

Auerroes in 2: Rhet. c. 18.

ad sub-
missionem

quam inuenti-
onem veritatis
proficiunt,

Bern lib. I. de confid. c. 10.

subverting, then the manifesting of the truth.

And that yee may the better heare Controversies, suffer not Pleaders to lead you away in hearing their sarcasmes and bitter invectives one against another, which are nothing but the theft of time, and the delusion of judgement; Lawyers then leaue their Clients case, and fall to their owne; Judges then heare trying of wits and not trying of causes; these are insolencies offered to your high authority, and interruptions to your heedy hearing. Oh therefore banish all occasions of disturbance; wash out the moates, and wring the cloth, that it may (as the Pythagorean said to his Judges) the better take the dye; bee present with your ripest wits, and grauest attentions, aduisedly consider all passages; they are Controversies, that is, such things as may bee controverted, argued on either sides, therefore heare them. Heare the controversies of your brethren.

Judge righteously.

Now let vs come to the faire deciding, judge righteously. Not heare and suppress iudgement, for this were to make a solemne hearing an empty shew; not heare and delay judgement, for this were to hold patients so long to their diet-drinke, till the remedy proue worse then the disease; protracting or retarding of causes, is but to set a sluice in the free current, or to digge a fish-pond for Lawyers; if suters after all their declarations, joyning of issues, pleadings, and producing of witnesses, should be driuen off to a dilatory course, it were to make a prison of the judgement-seat, or to turne a set battell into a siege; therefore debate, and decide, heare, and Judge; and as there ought to be a dextrous hearing, so not a sinister iudgement, therefore Judge righteously, which is the point I mind to prosecute.

Doct.

Judge righteously] From hence I obserue, that the true forme of iudgement, is Righteousnesse; to with-hold the one, is to destroy the very entity of the other; therefore is God so district, that there might bee no forging nor forcing in the cause of iustice. Prese not than the Law; let it looke with • out. 16. 29.

the

for Iudges.

the face right forward, and doe not turne the head of it vp on the shoulders, for this were to make a distorted creature of Iudgement. Cursed bee hee that hindereth right; and what Deut. 27. 19.
greater hinderance can there be imagined then from vnright- eous iudgement? it is as if the gates should be shut against those forces that come to succour a place after long extremity suffered; this Curse so iust that it needeth not be muttered in a corner, but proclaymed Cum sonitu, with a whole multitude resounding it. For Cursed be hee that hindereth right, and all the people shall say Amen; that is a grievous sinne that is sealed with the curse of a multitude. God reprobeth his Iudges, because they turned Iudgement into gall, and Amos 6. 12.
the fruit of righteousnesse into wormewood, Iudgement and right- eousnesse were gone, and there was nothing but gall and wormewood left in their stead; people come with prouoked appetites to the Tribunall, thinking there to have their true diet equity, and loe there is nothing but gall and worme- wood; Oh, people goe away with fowre lookes to thinke, that instead of the delicates of Iustice, there should be nothing but dishes of bitternesse; they may looke for such fruits in the streetes amongst their neighbours at home, but who would looke for gall and wormewood such vnfauory plants to grow at a Tribunall; There Iudges the great Feast- makers of the Country, feed proterue men with the refection of the iust; For as Iustice punisheth the wicked, so iniustice deuoureth the righteous. Therefore execute true iudgement; let iudgement Vt iustitia in-have no other stampe then that which it got in the mold of iustos sic ini-equity. That Iudge bringeth a foreiner into the state in stead iustitia iustos of Iudgment that doth not naturallize it by Righteousnes, premis. Petr.
& shewes a Monster to the world in stead of Iudgement that Zach. 7. 9. deprives it of the reflexe of Righteousnesse; a mans greatest Adversary then is the Iudge, and the most vnsupportable injury comes from the Righter of wrongs. He must needs looke for pitifull measure where the Balance it selfe is set wrong, and expect to bee split vpon the Rockes where the very Pilot will not saile according to his compasse; Rapes are abominable finnes (Iudge Charles sayes so, and oh that wee

wee might other find him not onely a King, but a Judge what are those then that rauish iustice? the iust man should find the Tribunall an Altar of refuge, not a shambles of destruction; let not any therefore draw Patronage out of the Judges lips; no, Judge, but Judge righteously.

Use.

This serves to exhort Judges to Righteousness, the Prescript forme of judgement; that they might not haue the stains of the conscience, nor the gripes of conscience, such a Judge shall be the sun of his times, and shine vppon his Tribunall, like the morning starre of publique comfort. Oh therefore they may Judge righteously.

Nūv iuds ius.
Suct.

First, lay aside all passions for Judgement must be framed in a vindictiue breast; accusations therefore must be giuen, or the brow of anger must be flighted, yet try not with furious Nero, I am now my owne man, and of this man will I be auenged; no, let insolencies haue their sharpe retribution, but for these, let not equity be overthrowne; cleere light cannot be seene in a Tempest, nor the truth of a cause discerned in a heart obscured with grieuances, and disturbances; oh therefore lay aside all irritated, exasperated passions and thoughts, before ye come to pronounce sentence; for they are like to giue Rancorous, and not Righteous Judgements.

Pro. 28. 24.
Amos 2. 6.

Es. 1. 23.
Eze. 22. 27.

Hos 4. 18.
Quis non erubescat dicere

Secondly, lay aside all respect to bribes, for this will else to make the seat of Judgement, a farme, or a fayre seat of commodities; there is a little equity to bee expected, if Judges should tread inward, or like the Oracles of the Heathens, should giue no answer without costly oblations; such Judges will transgresse for a morsell of bread, and sell the Righteous for siluer, and the poore for shoes; doe yee not remember what God saith of such Judges, that they are companies of thieves, and that they are in the midst of the people, like rauening Wolves, as if the Judgement-seat were turned into a hill of Robbers, or Beastes of prey, were got into the Tribunall; how are thole counted gasping, insatiable, impudent Judges, whose voyce is nothing but Bring-ye? yea, who should not blush to say, what wilt thou giue me, that